Horse Runs in Medford.

A horse driven by W. D. West of Applegate, frightened by a passing automobile ran away on West Main street in Medford Thursday morning and completely demolished the carriage. Mr. West escaped with minor bruises sustained when he was hurled from the carriage into a parkway. The horse continued on a run toward Jacksonville.

Mr. West did not determine the identity of the autoists who ran up behind him frightening the horse.

Financial Legislation.

It has been definitely decided by Congress to make an effort to pass a Currency Bill. It is a fact that the volume of money circulating in this country is not sufficiently large to meet the requirements of business when prosperity is at full tide. Whenever there is a demand in the West for large sums of money with which to move a large crop, the finances of the Eastern Banks have to be so severely strained that they are frequently near the breaking point, so the statesmanship of Congress is to be exercised towards providing for an elastic currency which will expand in accordance with the demand and requirements of healthy business. This bill will develop the fact as to whether Congress contains within its membership a Senator or Representative who has really mastered the great subject of finance, which is second in importance to no question before the country today. England, France and Germany are never known to have a panic in times of peace such as we had in 1907 which was not only a panic in times of peace, but was a panic in the midst of unusual prosperity and if our financial laws governing banks and finance had not been so antiquated that panic could have been easily prevented.

Subtle Reasoning.

If the attitude of the army engineers who reported adversely on the advisability of deepening the Siuslaw river from Florence to Aceme is approved by Congress, the Florence harbor will be enabled to handle the traffic of the great country that is tributary to it about the time that Gabriel blows his resounding trumpet. The engineers report that the harbor at present does not handle sufficient shipping business to warrant the expenditure. The actual fact is that sufficient business to pay returns on the investment cannot be there until the river is deepened. This subtle reasoning, if it is heard by Congress, will provide a deadlock that will endure until the heavens fall.

Such a report is a part of a general misunderstanding of the west. It is the result of measuring conditions here by those of long settled countries where development responds slowly to investment, and where large expenditures for river and harbor improvements are not followed by a correspondingly large increase in business. In the west, business awaits upon opportunity. It cannot increase without facilities, but when the facilities are provided it moves forward at a rate that is astonishing.

The Siuslaw river will pay large returns on every cent that is spent in improving it. It is the natural outlet for one of the largest bodies of timber in the world. It is the shipping point for a large and fertile territory. But if a ridiculous policy of demanding the business before the money to provide the means of handling it is forthcoming is followed the resources of the country will be locked up forever.—Eugene Reasoning.

Baseball and Civilization.

Elwood S. Brown, physical director of the Y. M. C. A. at Manila, has been telling the reporters of San Francisco about the craze for baseball that has seized upon the "little brown brother." Here is a sample yarn:

"A few months ago a company of constabulary landed from a steamer on Jolo island. As the soldiers were arranging the camp they heard an awful uproar. Seizing their guns, the entire company, believing that a whole village was being butchered, crept through the jungle toward a clearing whence the sounds came. As they reached the edge of the trees and through the leaves, they perceived about a thousand natives dancing and yelling at the top of their voices. A fleeting creature, clad in a loin cloth, was traveling toward a palm leaf spread upon the ground to designate first base and an excited little brown man, afterward identified as one of the chiefs, was informing the multitude that the hit had been 'fair.'"

Mr. Brown says further that three-fourths of the youngsters in the Filipino schools are followers of some sport, and that the epidemic of baseball rages the more fiercely because the mildness of the weather permits it to be played the year round.

George Ade told us long ago how the cocktail follows the flag, and some of us were inclined to shake our heads. But baseball is another matter altogether—as radically American as the cocktail and any number of times more wholesome. It is certainly very agreeable to hear that league balls are supplanting Mauser balls as civilizing agents among the Filipinos. There has never been any danger of our underrating baseball, but perhaps we haven't always recognized its possibilities as a pacifier.—Ex.

Attorney For the Plaintiff at Jacksonville, Oregon.

A Realistic Proposal

By EDNA B. TOWER

It was in the sweet summer time, when the insects were humming, the birds were twittering, the leaves were moving drowsily, that two young persons sat in a flower garden. If the restful scene about them were not enough to stir their young blood to love, the perfume of the flowers was more than enough.

"I went the other night," he said, "to see this young fellow Brown show off in palmistry. He read my lines, and it was really quite remarkable how many truths he told me."

"What did he tell you?"

"Well, he said that I hadn't yet met the girl who would make me happy."

He looked at her searchingly. She looked out at the flowers.

"Did he say you had met the girl who would make you miserable?" she asked.

"Well, no; he didn't say anything about that."

"Then he didn't mention any particular girl?"

"No; he didn't."

"Oh, I didn't know but that he had somebody with a red head and freckles in view."

"He explained that what he meant was that I had met a girl who could make me happy if she wanted to, but she was not to be drawn out in this fashion. Young men are prone to fish for a sten. They don't usually get it. The girl prefers to have him do it all alone by himself. It's not her part to tell him anything to aid him in making up his mind whether he is to be accepted or thrown over her shoulder."

"Did he say she was red headed?"

"No. Why do you ask that?"

"Oh, everybody has noticed your attentions to Sue Baker."

"Everybody except myself. I have not noticed it."

"Then it's time you did."

His feeling around for a sign was not succeeding. There was a faint indication of jealousy in this continued introduction of a girl to whom he had shown some attention, but this didn't mean love or that he would be an accepted suitor if he proposed. He was ready to offer both love and marriage, but what man cares to do that without some assurance that he is not to be turned down?

"Miss Baker is a lovely girl," he said after a pause. "Any man who wins her I think she would make happy. Her hair isn't red, it's auburn, and I never noticed any freckles on her face."

"I dare say she is a beautiful character. That's what you want, I suppose, and if you are color blind she would suit you very well."

"I don't see what she has to do with this conversation. I didn't bring her into it."

He said this in a miffed tone. She recognized that it was time to tighten the line a bit—the fish might get off the hook. But she didn't do any jerking.

"Are you going to the tennis tournament on Saturday?" she asked.

"I don't know. I'm not especially interested in tennis just now."

"Got anything on your mind?"

"Nothing particular—I mean nothing that should make me stay away from the tournament. Shall I drop in for you as I go by?"

"I'm not sure I'll go."

"No; I have a partial engagement for Saturday."

"Oh! The men don't have to work Saturday afternoons. They have a chance to dally with their sweethearts I should have remembered that."

"I didn't say my engagement was with a man."

"No, but that was to be inferred. Don't you think you could get out of it and go out for a spin in my auto?"

She divined that this indicated an in-

$100 Reward, $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity, Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. #### Look to Your Plumbing.

You know what happens in a house in which the plumbing is in poor condition—everybody in the house is liable to contract typhoid or some other fever. The digestive organs perform the same functions in the human body as the plumbing does for the house, and they should be kept in first class condition all the time. If you have any trouble with your digestion take Chamberlain's Tablets and you are certain to get quick relief. For sale by all dealers.—Advertisement.

California Woman Seriously Alarmed. "A short time ago I contracted a severe cold which settled on my lungs and caused me a great deal of annoyance. I would have had coughing spells and my lungs were so sore and inflamed I began to be seriously alarmed. A friend recommended Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, saying she had used it for years. I bought a bottle and it relieved my cough the first night, and in a week I was rid of the cold and soreness of my lungs," writes Miss Maria Gerber, Savelle, Cal.
