WE NEED A GOOD HOTEL.

While several projects for the betterment of this town are being agitated and discussed, why not take up the hotel question?

The writer contended for the past four year that the opening of a good hotel would do more to bring transient people to the town than any other improvement possible, and it is to this class--the transient people, lawyers, salesmen, tourists, etc. we must look for a good deal of the patronage necessary to support the institutions of the town.

We cannot hope to be a manufacturing city to any great extent, for at least two reasons, viz: lack of transportation facilities, being off the main thoroughfare of commerce, and secondly, the absence of the necessary raw material; hence we must look to a certain extent to the patronage of travelling people who for business or pleasure may be induced to visit our little city. It is an undeniable fact that those towns which have the best hotels and can offer the best service to the transient public secure most of their patronage.

It is a matter of common talk on the street that the old U. S. hotel building can be secured at a reasonable price and if it could be secured, remodelled and refurnished it would be an excellent proposition for some of our monied men to tackle. It looks probable that a stock company could be formed to undertake the financing of the proposition; the matter seems feasible and we predict it would be more substantial benefit to the town than many of the projects so ardently advocated.

As a matter of fact, the opening of a good hotel, with modern conveniences would do more to tie the county seat to Jacksonville than anything else imaginable.

It Pays to Advertise.

If your business doesn't "go" and the sales are mighty low, And things begin to look a trifle bad: When the things that looked "im-mense" now resemble "thirty cents,"

Just try the stunt of putting in an ad: You will find that it will pay, you can see it every day--

And you'll admit it was the proper caper, So get a pad and chalk work out a line of talk, And put an advertisement in the paper, Put it to 'em good and hard, whether selling goods or land, And try to hit 'em plumb between the eyes; Make your copy good and strong and you'll see 'fore long That it really pays for you to advertise.--Selected.

PRONOUNCING CHINESE.

Variations in the Tone Mean Entirely Different Words.

At the University of London recently a lecture was given by Dr. Jones on the pronunciation of Chinese, and in the course of his remarks the speaker explained that the difficulties of learning the pronunciation of Chinese, though real enough, have been rather exaggerated by those who have written on that subject. When treated phonetically the language becomes not much more difficult to learn than German or French.

The chief thing to remember is that the study of Chinese is a matter of singing rather than talking. Dr. Jones said. In English the variations in tone as we talk mean variations in expression. In Chinese variations in tone mean totally different words.

A little of the Chinese method is present, even in our own language, and the lecturer pointed out that the simple word "yes" may be so varied in tone as to mean "It is the case," "Of course it is the case," "It is really so" and "It may be so, but I'm not quite sure."

The student who wishes to learn good Chinese must familiarize himself perfectly with at least six tones. There is a seventh, but that may be more or less left out of account. According to the tone in which they are pronounced there are words in Cantonese which have six separate and distinct meanings. The Chinese word "fan," for instance, may be so pronounced, or rather sung, as to mean six different words and such widely different ones as sleep, powder and courageous.--Springfield Republican.

London's Mighty Roar.

James Russell Lowell was never so happy as during his tenure of the American legation. "I do like London," he writes to Charles Eliot Norton soon after his appointment. "It gives a fillip to my blood, now growing more sluggish than it used to be. I love to stand in the middle of Hyde park and forget myself in that dull roar of ever circulating life which bears a burden to the song of the thrush I am listening to. It is far more impressive than Niagara, which has nothing else to do and can't help itself. In this vast torrent all the drops are men."--London Chronicle.

What He Wanted it For.

"I wish I had money enough to get married," he remarked. "She looked down and blushed. "And what would you do?" she asked, looking very hard at a little design on the carpet. "I would spend it traveling," he replied. And the thermometer fell 10 degrees.--Lippincott's.

Sarcastic.

"I don't like to invite Mrs. Parvett to my bride party, and yet she's a sure loser and good pay." "I don't think you are going to get her money without her company," said her sarcastic husband. "What do you expect her to do--frame your invitation and mail you a check?"--Louisville Courier-Journal.

Napoleon Lost Something Too.

Host--That is the sword of my great uncle. He lost his arm at Waterloo. Guest--Yes, it's a terrible place for losing things. I lost a bag there only last week!--London Opinion.

California Woman Seriously Alarmed
 "A short time ago I contracted a severe cold which settled on my lungs and caused me a great deal of annoyance. I would have had some big spells and my lungs were so sore and inflamed I began to be seriously alarmed. A friend recommended Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, saying she had used it for years. I bought a bottle and it relieved my cough the first night, and in a week I was rid of the cold and soreness of my lungs." writes Miss Maria Gerber, Sausalito, Cal.
