Federals Driven Out of Sonora
 Douglas, Ariz., July 1.—Guaymas, Sonora, where the last stand of General Ojeda's shattered force, was made, is today in the hands of General Obregon's invading constitutionalists. Driven back to the sea, General Ojeda, with but a scant thousand of the 3500 army which set out for Hermosillo several weeks ago, has gathered the remnants of his force together, boarded a transport and sailed for the south.
 A large number of wealthy Mexican citizens also took refuge in flight. Aristocratic Guaymas looks sullenly on this democratic victory.
 After investing Guaymas, Obregon, commanding the rebels, took immediate steps to prevent pillage.
 It is believed in Douglas that peace has been expedited by the sweeping rebel victory.
 General Barron, who commanded the federal garrison in Guaymas, preceded Ojeda in his flight.

KILLED IN AUTO RACE
Machine in Medford Race Turns Turtle. One Killed, Another Injured.
 The auto race at the Medford celebration resulted in the death of one participant and the serious injury of another.
 As one of the autos containing two men was rounding a sharp corner at a terrific speed, a tire on one of the rear wheels blew up capsizing the machine and throwing the occupants to the ground. One of the occupants was hurled a distance of some twenty feet escaping with his life. The other, a young man named Helms was caught beneath one of the wheels of the overturned machine and almost instantly killed.

FOR CAMPERS
Food Supplies for Camp. Equipment for the Camp.
 Transportation facilities govern very largely the quantity and kind of supplies which may be carried on any camping expedition. There are certain staple food materials such as flour and beans which are common to all camps; there are the desirable but bulky articles such as canned vegetables, and the often impossible luxuries such as eggs and cream. The forest ranger with a pack horse, the four-man hunting party, and the large lumber camp, all have different food problems—but there are several things to be considered in buying supplies for any one of these. A food to be useful for camp and trail must contain the maximum amount of nutriment, or food value, with a minimum of bulk. Although these conditions limit the available food materials somewhat, it is possible to have palatable and nourishing food, and also have variety, which is usually lacking in camp fare. A judicious choosing of 100 pounds of supplies will result in a variety which will add much to the health and comfort of the woodsman.

The Grazing Industry
 Washington, June 25.—As a detail of its campaign against prairie dogs on the sheep and cattle ranges of the West, the Biological Survey of the Department of Agriculture is using carbon bisulphide in connection with eight tons of poisoned grain for the extermination of the little pests on the ranges of the Coconino National Forest, Arizona.
 Generally the Biological Survey works to prevent the extinction of birds and mammals. In the present instance it justifies its war against prairie dogs on the principle of the campaign against the bubonic-plague rat and squirrel, or against the rabbit which girdles fruit trees.
 The damage done by the prairie dog, it is pointed out, affects the stock-raising industry in two ways. First, many acres are laid bare in the neighborhood of prairie dog villages, and the amount of food available for cattle is proportionally reduced. Second, valuable animals, frequently horses, have to be killed after they have broken a leg in a prairie dog hole.
 According to the Department's expert the stock industry has unwittingly favored the increase of prairie dogs by killing off coyotes that prey upon stock but are also natural enemies of the prairie dogs.
 Last year on the Cochotopa National Forest of Colorado fifteen tons of poisoned oats freed some 20,000 acres of grazing land from prairie dogs. On Pike National Forest, in the same State, seven tons of oats were used to clear 60,000 acres. This year five or six tons of the poisoned grain only was used on the Cochotopa and three tons sufficed for the Pike.
 It is estimated that on all the National Forests about 275,000 acres, which had been rendered worthless for grazing purposes by prairie dogs, have been restored to their former usefulness. Since it takes on the average 40 acres to support one cow, or eight sheep, this means a gain in the carrying capacity of the range sufficient to run 6,950 cattle or 55,600 sheep.
 In 1908 the government began to carry out this campaign, and in 1911 worked on a large scale; it was so successful that in 1912 the quantity of poison put out was doubled. This year's campaign is one of cleaning up the areas where there was almost complete extermination in 1912.

KIDNAPPER ARRESTED
Trapped by Citizens Who Fire Revolvers—J. W. Smith Held in County Jail
 Charged with the attempted alleged abduction of a nine year old Central Point girl, Wednesday afternoon, a man giving the name of J. W. Smith a tramp, is held in the county jail, following a frustrated dash for liberty in which he was halted by bullets whizzing by his head. After his arrest by Marshal Holmes of Central Point, Smith refused to talk, and maintained silence, the attitude of angry citizens frightening him, talk of summary action being voiced.
 According to the story of citizens, Smith met the little girl, whose name is withheld, near the fruit warehouse, and induced her to take a walk. He was seen by two men, who yelled at him. Smith, who had the child by the arm started to run, when the two took up the chase. On the way a revolver was secured, and two shots fired, bringing the fleeing man to a halt. He was then turned over to the city marshal, and later to Sheriff Singler. Prosecuting Attorney Kelly will file a formal complaint against Smith today.
 Smith is a middle aged man fairly well dressed, and has been around Central Point for a couple of days. He refused to make any comment on his action and appeared to be satisfied that he was behind bars.
