THE BOND ELECTION

The bond issue having carried Tuesday by a large majority, it is now up to the minority to accept the result as the expressed will of Jackson county's voters and laying aside whatever prejudice they may have had against incurring this indebtedness, roll up their sleeves to help in the construction of the best system of permanent roads in the state of Oregon.

The result of the election was no surprise to most people; the majority of the voters of the county live along or at least within a few miles of the route of the proposed road and as there is no question as to the value of good roads to the district traversed by them, it was simply a business proposition which admitted of but one answer and that one has been given in no uncertain manner.

To the voter in the outlying districts the matter appeared in a different light; he could not see much benefit to him or his property by the building of a road miles away from him and with no immediate prospects of its reaching his district. Let us hope that the construction of the main road will be followed in the near future with laterals reaching to every part of the county.

BY THE GREEN MONSTER

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Janeway's business called him often away from home. One afternoon he returned from one of these trips glad to get back and, opening the door with his latchkey, went upstairs. In the upper hall he found himself face to face with a man he had never seen. He was well dressed, and Janeway, instead of taking him for a burglar and supposing there might be some mistake about his being there, awaited an explanation.

"I admit," said the man, "that this looks bad for your wife, but any man who will leave his wife at home for weeks, sometimes months at a time, deserves—"

"What do you mean, sir? Why are you in my house?"

"Come! Maintain your equality. Consider that by making a scandal you will injure not only yourself, but will ruin your wife's reputation."

Janeway was too paralyzed to speak. He simply glared at the man, who continued:

"Take your revenge on me, not on her. I will meet you at any time or place you wish and enable you to inflict vengeance upon me to your heart's content. I will give you an opportunity to do by me as I confess, I would do by you under reversed similar circumstances. But the real cause of our quarrel need not be known. We can invent some pretext."

"Where is my wife?" thundered Janeway.

"For heaven's sake keep away from her, at least for awhile! In your present state of mind you are liable to commit murder."

Janeway hesitated. A fiery furnace was within him. He knew the man spoke the truth. It was all he could do to avoid clenching with him.

If he had had a weapon he would have killed him. But one idea took possession of him—to get away, somewhere, anywhere, that he might get himself from a temptation that would put him behind bars and might bring him to the scaffold. He turned, descended several steps, stopped short and said:

"Your name! And where can you be found?"

"Edmond Trowbridge, Calumet Club."

Janeway stopped for no more. Descending the stairs that a few moments before he had mounted with such pleasurable expectation, he rushed through the hall to the front door and went out. What he did during the next hour he has never been able to distinctly recall. The time was occupied walking the streets, but what streets are a blank to him. His brain was in a turmoil. Should he find a friend and send him to the man who had ruined him with a challenge? Not yet. He was unwilling to give his confidence to any one. Should he go to his wife and hear what she had to say? Doubtless her visitor had told her what had occurred and she was prepared for the worst.

He was lost in wonder how the woman with whom he had lived happily for a dozen years could have so deceived him. Could this person who had done this thing really be his wife? Was he not asleep and suffering from a horrible nightmare? Was there not some mistake? Gradually his feelings so far subsided as to permit him to exercise common sense. What did common sense dictate as the first thing to do? Why, to go to his wife and hear her story.

It was 9 o'clock when he again opened his front door and stepped into the house.

"Is that you, dear?" came his wife's voice from upstairs. "Why are you so late? You telephoned you would be home to dinner."

Janeway did not deign any reply to these remarks. He was trying to make up his mind to the disagreeable work before him. He staggered into the living room and, throwing himself into an easy chair, covered his face with his hands. Hearing a step in the hall he withdrew them and saw his wife standing in the doorway gazing at him with a frightened look.

"Frank?" she said. "What under heaven is the matter?"

There was a ring at the telephone. She paid no attention to it, but, advancing, knelt beside him and took his hand.

"Answer the phone," he said, in order to gain time.

Going to the instrument she took down the receiver. Then she said to her husband:

"It's the chief of police. He says a man has been brought in with articles on him with our name on them."

Janeway jumped from his chair as though struck by an electric shock. Rushing to the phone he snatched the receiver from his wife and called for a description of the man arrested. When he had heard he took her in his arms and hugged her till she cried out:

"What does it all mean?" she asked.

"I came home at 5 o'clock and found the thief here."

"When I was out? Why did you let him go?"

"I told me a story and listened."

"What story?"

"Why he said he said that you were dead and he was the undertaker come to measure you for your coffin."

"What assurance? Now I understand what you were suffering when I came into the room."

"They clung together in an embrace. Fortunately for him there was no need for a confession."

SUMMONS

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE STATE OF OREGON FOR THE COUNTY OF JACKSON.

Ellen E. Wells, Plaintiff.

vs.

William L. Wells, Defendant. Suit in Equity for divorce.

T. William L. Wells the above named defendant:

In the name of the State of Oregon, You are hereby required to appear and answer the Plaintiff's Complaint against you now on file in the above entitled Court and cause, on or before the last day of the time prescribed in order for publication of summons therein, to-wit: on or before the 21st day of October 1913, said cause being the expiration of six weeks from the day of first publication of this summons and if you fail to appear and answer, for want thereof, in plaintiff's complaint against you now on file in the above entitled Court and cause, the relief demanded in said complaint, succinctly stated, as follows:

That the bonds of matrimony existing between plaintiff and defendant be dissolved and abrogated, and that the costs and disbursements of this suit be taxed to defendant, and that plaintiff be allowed such other and further relief as to the Court seems just and equitable.

This summons is published in the Jacksonville Post, by order of Hon. E. C. Tuve, Judge of the County Court, of Jackson County Oregon, which said order was made and entered of record on the 13th day of September 1913, and the first publication is the 13th day of September 1913.

J. A. LEMERY,
Attorney for Plaintiff.

Speeds of the Stars.

Years of arduous research have revealed that the stars nearly all move with possible speeds of from ten to thirty miles per second, our star, the sun, moving about thirteen miles per second. But the rapid stars, those having large proper motions, 80% of eight or nine seconds of arc per year, are flying at such terrible velocities that they form a class by themselves. Their speeds are between 100 and 500 miles per second, the latter being that of the huge sun Arcturus. The attraction of the quantity of miles in all stars that is bodies that are visible to the eye or to photographic plates—is totally unable to cause these immense velocities. This shows that the quantity of invisible matter is far greater than that in the 100,000,000 visible bodies. The quantity of matter able to impart a speed of 100 to 500 miles per second is far beyond all imagination—Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American.

Squared Accounts.

A dispute once arose between an English landlord and his tenant. The latter had given notice to quit, but would not put a bill in his window to say this house was "To Be Let."

To make matters worse, they went to law about it. The judge, having heard the case, made an order for the defendant to put a bill up within fourteen days.

The landlord was so overjoyed at his victory that on the fourteenth day he took a friend with him around to the house to chaff his tenant. The bill was up in the window plain enough, but under it was another bill, which ran as follows:

"Cause of leaving bad drains"

Nothing is troublesome that we do willingly.—Thomas Jefferson.
