A Long Life and a Broad One.

An English doctor recently said that ambition to live to a great old age isn't a good one and doubted whether constant efforts to lengthen the average life are for the good of the race. He apparently favors a short life and a merry one. Perhaps it isn't long life that makes the world happy, but broad life. Thirty full, energetic years may be better than sixty years of common place drudgery. But why not sixty full, energetic years? Who knows what the world loses when a man dies at thirty? So much has been accomplished by men who have reached sixty and even seventy and eighty that it seems good policy to keep all persons on earth as long as possible. The man who honestly disapproves efforts to prolong life is a rarity and it is lucky for the world that he is.—Savannah News.

North British Manners.

I traveled upon the top of a car the other evening, says a correspondent in the Glasgow News, with a man who seemed to have strong views upon the subject of good manners and polite address. He was accompanied by his daughter, a pretty little girl of about five years of age, who was thirsting for information.

The proud parent was explaining at some length that car conductors do not retain the whole contents of their bags for their own personal use, when the little girl interrupted him with an interrogative "Eh?"

"What learned you the say 'eh'?" asked the father in reproving tones. "When you don't hear what anybody says you should not say 'eh'; it's no polite; you should say—'whit'."

A Dusky Street.

Wullie Dalziel, the old shepherd, had retired at last from active service after spending the whole of his life in a little cottage away at the back of the hills, a full three miles as the crow flies from the nearest road. He moved into a house near the head of the valley above Crasbie Howe, situated on the side of the lonely road. But Wullie was not quite happy. He was distracted. He was worried by the traffic. He told a friend that there was no peace in this bit for an auld body. "Three bicycles and a cart in the same day! Wha, it's a fair toon!"—Manchester Guardian.

Dice.

Dice are said by some to have had their origin in occult sources, but more reasonably they are ascribed to Psalmedes of Greece, B. C. 1244. Those exhumed at Thebes are identical with those used today, and the games played with them are the simplest and most widely known games of chance in the world.

Where One May Dig to China.

Freeland, Pa., is exactly what its name indicates—free land. It is land which when purchased becomes the absolute property of the buyer, and his title is not subject to mining royalties, ground rent or any other reservation. In this respect it differs very much from the land surrounding the town on all sides and owned by the coal mining corporations, which land when purchasable at all is restricted to the surface rights only. In 1808 August Dooop, foreseeing the need of a town site that would be free from the control of the mining corporations, bought several hundred acres of land. He laid out the town, and in selling the lots he emphasized the fact that it was "free land" and the owner's rights extended as deeply into the earth as he might care to prosecute. By common consent the town's first name was Freehold, but this was ordered changed by the postoffice department to avoid confusion with the older town of Freehold, N. J. In deference to local sentiment the name Freeland was substituted.—Ladies' Home Journal.

First Flight Sensations.

The sensations when you first shoot up rapidly in the air are distressful to the novice, says Captain C. Mellor in the Airman. This is how Captain Mellor felt, sitting behind the pilot in a biplane:

"The rush and press of air are terrific. My chest seems to be getting stove in and my ribs feel inclined to give way. I have difficulty in exhaling. The smallest opening of the nasal valve seems to give too much air. My blood rapidly becomes superoxygenated, and I experience a feeling of exhilaration. I should like to shout or at least say 'Ha, ha' but the pressure of the wind is too great for me to say anything, and I feel it best to keep my mouth shut."

It was much the same when taking a trial flight in a monoplane from the Berliet school. At the end of the first circuit he "felt like blowing up."

Jupiter Cold and Dim.

Jupiter is 1,283 times larger than the earth, but the quantity of matter in this huge volume is only 316 times that in the earth; hence its density is low—in fact, only 41 per cent greater than that of water. Jupiter has been weighed with extreme precision, this because its moons can be measured as to distance and specific speeds of orbital revolution with the last degree of accuracy. But, then, it is cold out there, the distance of Jupiter being 5.2 times that of the earth from the sun, the intensity of solar light and heat energy received by the good Jovian folk, if there are any such creatures, being only one twenty-seventh that received here by humans. We would sit once in a while in cold and dim twilight if taken out to Jupiter.—Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American.

Crocodiles as Policemen.

There has been instances in Papua a which long sentence prisoners have had no desire to return to their home because they grew fat in jail. However, those cases are exceptional, and attempts to escape are not infrequent. "Crocodiles were a great danger to the runaway, and there was a belief in a part of the Papuan gulf that the crocodiles were in league with the government."

A prisoner escaping from jail was once severely lacerated by one of these reptiles while crossing a river. The criminal crawled to the nearest village constable and gave himself up to justice. "No good me fight along government now; alligator he help government," was the complaint of the escaped.—London Cor. New York Sun.

The First Balloons.

I suppose you heard of those strange globes invented in Paris which rise into the air though encumbered with the weight of human animals. I wish we could procure one and travel together among the clouds. At night we would illuminate our flying palace and hover like angry meteors above the habitations of our enemies, who perhaps have not yet been made acquainted with this wonderful invention. Like a certain mischievous bird which Ovid celebrates, we would dart down upon the graceful innocents and carry them off in spite of the screams of their relations. Think how triumphantly we should sail through the calm, blue ether 10,000 feet above this dirty planet.—From a Letter of William Beckford (1783).

He Got It.

"I had a dream the other night," said the joker at a luncheon table recently. "I dreamed I was in business with a rich man, selling potted flowers. But business was bad, and we decided to discontinue business. I wanted the pots and flowers and took them."

"What did the rich man want?" asked one of the guests innocently.

"He wanted the earth," replied the wit.—Exchange.

Well Named.

"What do you call your dog?" "Stock Market."

"What a peculiar name! Any particular reason?"

"I should say so. Most unreliable dog you ever saw. You can never tell what he's going to do next."—Life.

Life and Death.

Let us exhaust the mystery of our life before forsaking it for the mystery of our death. Maurice Maeterlinck in Century Magazine.

Usual Result.

He was on "pressure bent." She—And then he—And then, before I knew it, I was "broke."—Brooklyn Life.

A Professional Love Letter Writer.

In the American Magazine appears under the title "A Handy Man With the Pen" the confession of a man who is a professional writer of love letters, after dinner speeches, obituary poetry, etc. The following is one of the stories he tells about writing love letters for a customer:

"One day last fall a handsome young man, much embarrassed, appeared and after some hesitation confessed that he had neglected his education and was corresponding with a young woman with whom he was very much in love. She was a college graduate, and he desired to have his letters as well written as hers were, so he wanted me to write them. I advised him to write simply and as he talked, but he persisted, and twice a week he came, informed me concisely and briefly what he wanted to say to her, and I wrote the trials into them. He copied the letters himself, finishing frequently as he read what I had added in the way of sentiment. That young lady received some of the most wonderful love letters ever written. They were married during the winter."

Bengal and Its Language.

The people of Bengal number seventy millions and boast of perhaps the best culture in India at the present time. The language as a written language is only fifty years old. Though for over a thousand years it has been a dialect, there is in Indian history unfortunately no trace of Bengali having been an important literary tongue. The language originates from Sanskrit, the mother tongue from which every other Indian language has borrowed its alphabet, grammar and vocabulary; but, unlike others, Bengali never shrinks from gathering new materials. There are numerous Persian, French, Arabic and English words incorporated in it, and the wonder of it is that, instead of having been degraded into some vulgar form like pidgin English, Bengali has become the most literary, scientific and perhaps the most philosophic of modern Indian languages.—Argonaut.

Secret of a Sign Painter.

Sign painters do not usually achieve fame, but there was one in the last century who did achieve a curiously long lived bit of work. This was the man who painted a station sign at Harpers Ferry, shortly after the completion of the railway line to that point. The sign is in possession of a western society of engineers.

For a long time the society endeavored to ascertain who mixed the paint and applied it to the sign, which was placed in position at the Harpers Ferry station about forty years ago. Summer's heat and winter's storms in no way dimmed the luster of the paint used to make the words "Harpers Ferry." They stand out as boldly as the day they were formed by the painter's brush. The wood around the letters has been worn about a sixteenth of an inch by sand blown against it by fierce winds, but the letters have withstood the elements. It is asserted that no paint manufactured nowadays is equal in durability to that which was applied to the old sign.

For a long time, but without success, the society tried to learn the identity of this humble artist.—Boston Post.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.
