REPORT OF FAIR

By a High School Student Supplements Report in Another Column.

A report of the school fair written by a High School Student was handed in Friday afternoon after the report given in another column was in type. The first part of the Student's report was almost identical with our own but it contained the following which our account did not give:

The afternoon was taken up by the address, by G. A. Briscoe of Ashland, and the athletic sports. These sports consisted of foot races, jumping, etc., but the competition was not very keen.

Following is list of the winners:

100 yd. dash (all under 20 yrs.) Glen Darby.

50 yd. dash (all under 14 yrs.) Paul Jennings.

Sack race Richard Singler.

3 legged race Richard & Val. Singler.

Potato pony race (1st race) Leland Cantrill.

Potato pony race (2nd race) Edwin Kubil and Hubert Brown tied.

Match horse race (turning the peg) Reuben Pitz.

Broad jump (all under 20 yrs.) I an Bagshaw.

Preparations are now under way for the school fair to be held next fall, and from all indications it will rank far ahead of the one held last Saturday.

CHUNK OF GOLD

Worth $700. Shown in Medford by Joe Beeman, says the Sun

Joe Beeman of Gold Hill was in Medford Wednesday exhibiting a gold bar worth $700 taken from ore milled at the Lucky Bart mine on Sardine creek. The yield was from a few tons of ore, and Joe says there is more of the same material where the $700 came from. The mine is being worked every day, and Mr. Beeman and his associate are highly optimistic over the future output. The $700 was quite an attraction.

Their Strange Guide
By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Everybody in Paris dines in a cafe. That's what gives that city its especial flavor. After dinner this same "everybody" devotes himself to pleasure. Edward Fawning, an American, and his bride were in this city of joyful adventures and were dining at a cafe on the Rivoli. They had both heard of the view of life to be had in Paris and had come there to witness it, having agreed that they would do so together, the husband not going anywhere that he could not take his wife. But they did not know where to go. What is the use of being in a city where strange sights are to be seen without knowing where they are, what they are or how to get to them? Then, dinner finished, they were ready to go forth to take a peep at this gay city, but they had no guide. A man sat at a table near by, and Fawning, who spoke French fairly, said to him:

"Monsieur, my wife and I are Americans who have come to Paris to see what is to be seen, keeping within the bounds of what a lady may witness. Can you tell us of some of the places of interest and how to get to them?"

"Would monsieur like a guide?"

"Most assuredly."

"Then I am at your service."

A bargain was struck wherein Fawning should pay 50 francs, or $10, and the stranger should show them where to go. A taxicab was ordered, and the three entered, the stranger directing the coachman where to drive.

"Are you a professional guide?" asked Fawning as they rolled along.

"No, monsieur."

"I suppose you took pity on us," rejoined Fawning.

"I go with you for company. I am very alone in the world. I do not make friends easily."

"What is your regular business?"

"I am a surgeon."

Both bride and groom looked surprised. A surgeon was not a man to act as guide for a couple of Americans. Besides, the man did not have a professional cut. On the contrary, he was a very ordinary looking person.

"What is your name?" asked Fawning.

"Call me monsieur. It would not do for me to give you my name."

"I see. You, a surgeon, would not like to have it known that you have been a guide. You need not fear for us; we do not know a single person in Paris. But I can understand your fancy for taking up with a couple of strangers for a few hours, especially since you say you are in need of companionship. There is nothing so depressing as loneliness."

"Besides, my professional work is not inspiring."

"By no means. The severing of human limbs, to me, would be horrible."

"They drew up to a building where the tango was being danced. Monsieur told them to go up to a gallery and he would wait for them in the carriage. Fawning asked him to go with them, but he said that it would not do for him to be seen. Fawning could not understand where the companionship in such a course came in, but acquiesced. Indeed, there was something about the man that gave Mrs. Fawning a dread of him, and she was pleased that he had remained behind.

Those foreign curiosities that one hears so much about seldom come up to the expectation. Mrs. Fawning was not especially interested in the dances, and they did not remain long. Monsieur drove them to several other sights, but they were not especially charmed. About 11 o'clock they stopped at a restaurant and invited their guide to go in with them and drink a bottle of champagne.

"There will be no need for you to pay for the wine," said monsieur. "I esteem myself honored by having been admitted to your company. The fact is that I must perform an operation in the morning, and I dislike to be alone in the meantime. I feel under great obligations to you for keeping my mind off my work."

"They entered the cafe, and the guide refused to take the fee offered him, saying that he only agreed to it thinking that Fawning would not accept his services gratis. When the party were seated at a table he ordered a supper and champagne. Fawning insisted on paying the bill when it came, but it did not come. Finally Fawning said:

"Monsieur, I think we had better pay for our supper and go; madame is getting tired."

"In five minutes," returned the other, looking at a clock. "I must go at 12 to prepare for my operation."

"What—an operation so early in the morning?"

"The law prescribes the hour."

Mrs. Fawning looked at her husband uneasily. There was something about this strange man that repelled her. But she held her ground till midnight, when monsieur, bidding them good night, departed.

"Waited the bill!" said Fawning as soon as their guide had gone.

"There is no bill."

"Why so?"

"Monsieur de Paris never pays. All is free to him."

"Who is Monsieur de Paris? He said he was a surgeon."

"A surgeon? Yes, he is a surgeon in a specialty. He cuts off the heads of criminals."

Mrs. Fawning shuddered. "Come," she said; "let us get away at once."

Pigs and a Palace.
Klug Charles of Roumania made many changes in his Balkan kingdom since he arrived there in 1886 after an adventurous journey in disguise from Germany. Notable among them are the changes in the capital and the royal palace. When he made his triumphal entry as the country's new prince the carriage reached a house before which a guard of honor was stationed. "What house is that?" he asked. "That is the palace," replied General Goleski. The prince, thinking he had misunderstood him, said, "Where is the palace?" And the general was so embarrassed that he could only point silently to the one storied building. The principal feature of the view from the windows on one side was a gypsy encampment, with swine wallowing in the main road before the palace.

Sir Francis Drake Still a Terror.
No public monument is needed to keep alive among Mexicans the memory of Sir Francis Drake's exploits in Central and South America. Traveling in Mexico a few years ago Mr. Edward Smith records that he "heard a woman caiming a tempestuous child by saying, 'Ah! viene Drake' (Here comes Drake!) I made minute inquiries and found that it is a common threat to children on the Mexican coast, like unto 'Bony will get you' or 'The Black Douglas shall get you!' Fancy people still living in terror of seeing Drake's topicals on the horizon."—London Chronicle.

Tactless.
"Everything that is lovely reminds me of you," he fervently declared. "It is nice of you to say that," she replied. "I hope you see a great many lovely things."

"Doctor, how can I prevent my husband from talking in his sleep?"

"Well, you might try giving him a few opportunities in the daytime."—Pittsburgh Post.

W. D. Magli, a well known merchant of Whitewood, Wis., bought a stock of Chamberlain's medicines so as to be able to supply them to his customers. After receiving them he was himself taken sick and says that one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy was worth more to him than the cost of his entire stock of these medicines.
