

His First Lesson In Medical Practice

By THOMAS R. DEAN

Mrs. Elsie Tisdale was engaged to marry Mr. Bert Sawyer, a medical student. Mr. Sawyer was aware that Mrs. Tisdale was as sensitive as a bird. All she knew about physicians was when one of them came to the house, felt some one's pulse, naked about anatomy symptoms and, taking out a square bit of paper, wrote certain hieroglyphics on it that an apothecary understood.

What Bertie, as she called him, was going through to acquire a medical education she had no idea. That he ate peanuts off the breast of a cadaver he was at work on in the dissecting room; that he used the top of a skull, inverted, for a tobacco box; that he frequently took a hand, a foot or some other member of the human body to his room to cut to pieces, she had not even a suspicion. She supposed that a medical school was like other schools—books, books, nothing but books, and nice, clean books at that—while general professors lectured on how to cure a stomach ache and when to give the baby paregoric.

Bert, aware of her innocence, was very careful not to disturb her notions of the medical profession by enlightening her. By an unfortunate contretemps he suddenly burst upon her in his true fraternalness. She had been visiting a friend in a neighboring city and was returning by rail. She had been in the car but a few minutes when she saw the back of a head that looked familiar. It was turned aside toward a man who sat beside it, and she displayed the profile of Mr. Bert Sawyer. Facing the two sat a figure done up in a bigshawl.

Horrible to relate, the face of the figure was that of a skull.

Mr. Sawyer and his friend Billy Peterson had learned where the skeleton of a human being could be bought cheap. They had gone for it, purchased it and were taking it home. There were but few persons in the car, and the conductor had good naturedly permitted them to seat it opposite themselves.

Just as Mrs. Tisdale got into the car, re-recognized her lover and caught sight of the grinning face with no nose and empty eye sockets the conductor came through the train and, passing the two medicals, punched their tickets.

"Fare, governor," said Mr. Sawyer, addressing the skeleton. "Produce your ticket or you'll be put off."

The skeleton continued to grin, the conductor smiled, and the men in the car seemed to think it all very funny. There were two women besides Elsie, one sitting in the next seat and one further forward. Neither of them seemed to consider Mr. Sawyer's action a bit funny. As for Elsie, she was paralyzed with horror.

"Oh, he's all right," said the other medical. "He's no deadhead," and slipping his own ticket in the band of his hat, he put the hat on the skeleton's head.

This caused a burst of laughter from the men in the car and a scowl from the women.

"Smoke, governor?" said Bert, thrusting a cigar between the skeleton's toothless and gumless jawbones.

Another laugh from the men and a murmur of indignation from the women. The train rounding a curve, the skeleton lost its balance and fell against the arm of the seat.

"Sit up, governor," said Bert. "Don't be rolling around that way. The passengers will think you're being drunk."

"I smell his breath," said Billy—"gin and lemon peel."

The conductor was sitting at the end of the car, and one of the women called to him and told him that if he didn't stop that indecent behavior on the part of those young men she would report him for negligence of duty. At this the conductor went to the two medicals and told them they had better roll their bony companions in his shawl and stop the fun. To this they acceded, and that ended the performance. Soon after the train rolled into the station the medicals and the "governor" went out through the front end of the car, while Elsie left it to the rear. She held her handkerchief to her eyes to conceal her tears and to avoid being recognized by Bert, whom she intended never to meet again as her fiancé.

The next morning's mail brought him a note from her containing the few words:

"Our engagement is broken."

Sawyer looked at it drowsily and andwise, then chok it as if it were a toy puzzle. He could not understand it. And why something was wrong, and he went right over to the house to find out about it. Mrs. Tisdale came down with a suppressed smile and told him the cause of the break. Elsie had come home the day before heartbroken. She had supposed she was going to marry a gentleman and found that instead she was to marry a ghoul.

Bert was crushed.

"You'd better drop the whole affair," said Mrs. Tisdale, "and let Elsie get over it by degrees."

"She'll never get over it," groaned Bert. "She'll have a horror of me so long as she lives."

The affair was a good lesson to Bert. He became a famous physician and never forgot that the doctors and the lady are two different peoples. As for Elsie, he was right in assuming that she would always have a horror of him. She married another.

AUNT BETTY'S PRISONER

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.

When Stephen Ellis was elected sheriff of Ingham county the old jailer, not being of his party, had to go. To everybody's surprise the place was given to Uncle Jerry Stills.

Uncle Jerry was fifty years old, and his wife, who was always called Aunt Betty, was a couple of years younger. They were nice old people. They were liberal with what they had and knew about as much of the wickedness of the world as two children. The sheriff had lived with them for four or five years when he was a homeless orphan, and he owed a debt of gratitude which he wanted to pay. He knew their soft spots, and when they were ready to take possession of the stone jug he said:

"Now, listen to me! This is a jail and not an orphan asylum. No one will be sent here who is innocent or deserves pity. All prisoners are here because they deserve to be. Every last one will lie and play the hypocrite and must be carefully watched. There must be no foolishness with them. Uncle Jerry, you mustn't trust one of them as far as you can sling a bull by the tail."

"And, Aunt Betty, you must harden that kind heart of yours. I know you'd like to adopt every tramp in the state and let him swing in a hammock and have ham and eggs every meal, but it's a different thing here."

The jail was without a prisoner just then. At length a prisoner arrived to be cared for by Uncle Jerry and Aunt Betty. He had been tried for grand larceny and given a sentence of six months. He did not look more than eighteen years old and had a face as innocent as that of a child. He had tears in his eyes when he arrived at the jail.

"What a shame!" exclaimed Aunt Betty after a look at the prisoner.

"He is rather young," replied Uncle Jerry.

Aunt Betty sighed and said nothing more. She didn't know whether or not she'd tell the boy she pitied him. There was something she did do when she passed in the next meal, and she couldn't help herself. She looked sorrowful, and she asked the prisoner if he had a mother. He studied her face for a moment and then answered that he had.

At Aunt Betty's next visit to the cell she carried two extra dishes not provided for by the rates, and when the prisoner had thanked her he timidly asked:

"Good woman, dare I ask you to write to my mother for me?"

"If I write her she'll know you are in jail, and that will hurt her terribly."

"You must tell her, but you must tell her that the whole world has been against me. Nobody is willing to give me a show."

"You poor boy!" she pityingly said.

"They say I stole a watch from a farmhouse, but I never, never did. A tramp who came later took the watch."

"And didn't they get him?"

"No, and because they didn't they arrested me and sent me here. I was a poor boy, you see, and had no one to befriend me."

"What a shame! What a burning shame! Why, the judge and jury ought to be here in your place!"

"I want you to write to mother and tell her so. I don't want her to think I've become a wicked boy."

Uncle Jerry had to go out on business one afternoon and was not expected home until 9 o'clock in the evening. At 6 o'clock Aunt Betty prepared supper and invited the prisoner to sit at table with her. She reasoned that it would uplift and make a man of him. He ate a full meal, speaking words of gratitude between mouthfuls, and then rose up and took her by the throat and banged her head against the wall and took the prison key off its nail and opened the door to liberty. It was cold weather, but he went without hat or coat.

It took Aunt Betty about ten minutes to realize what had happened, and then she ran to the street bareheaded, not to shout for help, however. At a venture she turned to the right and ran for her life down the street and out in the country. Half a mile from the jail she caught sight of her "poor innocent boy." So did he of her, and he legged it like a rabbit. Over fences and across fields he led her, but she was a bound on the trail and ran him down at last.

"Then, as soon as she could get her breath, Aunt Betty cuffed and wallowed and spanked and pulled hair until that young man cried for mercy. On the way back to jail he got a cuff about once in every twenty feet, and when he found himself once more in his cell he was a thankful boy, indeed.

"Is everything all right?" asked Uncle Jerry as he arrived home.

"Yes, all right," was the answer.

"I found out about that boy today. He's a tough one. He has no mother and has been in jail about ten times. He's a slick thief and the biggest liar in the United States. I hope you won't let him bamboozle you with his talk and his tears."

"Jerry Stills, my name is Betty, ain't it?" asked the woman as she drew herself up.

"I'll never come home of a Betty letting anything that walks on two legs bamboozle her?"

"Can't say I ever did."

"And you never will!"

SUMMONS

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE STATE OF OREGON FOR THE COUNTY OF JACKSON.

Ellen E. Wells, Plaintiff, vs.
William L. Wells, Defendant. Suit in Equity for divorce.

To William L. Wells the above named defendant:

In the name of the State of Oregon, you are hereby required to appear and answer the plaintiff's complaint against you now on file in the above entitled Court and cause, on or before the last day of the time prescribed in order for publication of summons therein, to-wit: on or before the 25th day of October 1913, said date being the expiration of six weeks from the day of first publication of this summons and if you fail to appear and answer, for want thereof, the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded in said complaint, succinctly stated, as follows:

That the bonds of matrimony exist between plaintiff and defendant dissolved and abrogated; and that the costs and disbursements of this suit be taxed to defendant, and that plaintiff be allowed such other and further relief as to the Court seems just and equitable.

This summons is published in the Jacksonville Post, by order of Hon. F. M. Calkins, Judge of the County Court, of Jackson County Oregon, which said order was made and entered of record on the 13th day of September, 1913, and the first publication is the 13th day of September 1913.
