The Bear Medicine in the World.

"My little girl had diphtheria very bad. I thought she would die. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy cured her, and I can truthfully say that I think it is the best medicine in the world," writes Mrs. William Orvis, Clare, Mich. For sale by all druggists.—Advertisement.

W. Ting Wang is said to be an enthusiastic promoter of sports in China; even then, it will require all of that versatile gentleman's ability to keep on the right side of Celestial politics these days.

Their Strange Guide

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Everybody in Paris dines in a cafe. That's what gives that city its especial flavor. After dinner this same "everybody" devotes himself to pleasure. Edward Fawling, an American, and his bride were in this city of joyful adventures and were dining at a cafe on Rue Rivoli. They had both heard of the view of life to be had in Paris and had come there to witness it, having agreed that they would do so together, the husband not going anywhere that he could not take his wife. But they did not know where to go.

What is the use of being in a city where strange sights are to be seen without knowing where they are, what they are or how to get to them? Then, dinner finished, they were ready to go forth to take a peep at this gay city, but they still sat over their wine, for they had no guide. A man sat at a table near by, and Fawling, who spoke French fairly, said to him:

"Monsieur, my wife and I are Americans who have come to Paris to see what is to be seen, keeping within the bounds of what a lady may witness. Can you tell us of some of the places of interest and how to get to them?"

"Would monsieur like a guide?"

"Most assuredly."

"Then I am at your service."

A bargain was struck wherein Fawling should pay 50 francs, or $10, and the stranger should show them where to go. A taxicab was ordered, and the three entered, the stranger directing the coachman where to drive.

"Are you a professional guide?" asked Fawling as they rolled along.

"No, monsieur."

"I suppose you took pity on us," rejoined Fawling.

"I go with you for company. I am very alone in the world. I do not make friends easily."

"What is your regular business?"

"I am a surgeon."

Both bride and groom looked surprised. A surgeon was not a man to act as guide for a couple of Americans. Besides, the man did not have a professional cut. On the contrary, he was a very ordinary looking person.

"What is your name?" asked Fawling.

"Call me monsieur. It would not do for me to give you my name."

"I see. You, a surgeon, would not like to have it known that you have been a guide. You need not fear for us; we do not know a single person in Paris. But I can understand your fancy for taking up with a couple of strangers for a few hours, especially since you say you are in need of companionship. There is nothing so depressing as loneliness."

"Besides, my professional work is not inspiring."

"By no means. The severing of human limbs, to me, would be horrible."

They drew up to a building where the tango was being danced. Monsieur told them to go up to a gallery and he would wait for them in the carriage. Fawling asked him to go with them, but he said that it would not do for him to be seen. Fawling could not understand where the companionship in such a course came in, but acquiesced. Indeed, there was something about the man that gave Mrs. Fawling a dread of him, and she was pleased that he had remained behind.

Those foreign curiosities that one hears so much about seldom come up to the expectation. Mrs. Fawling was not especially interested in the dances, and they did not remain long. Monsieur drove them to several other sights, but they were not especially charmed. About 11 o'clock they stopped at a restaurant and invited their guide to go in with them and drink a bottle of champagne.

"There will be no need for you to pay for the wine," said monsieur. "I esteem myself honored by having been admitted to your company. The fact is that I must perform an operation in the morning, and I dislike to be alone in the meantime. I feel under great obligations to you for keeping my mind off my work."

They entered the cafe, and the guide refused to take the fee offered him, saying that he only agreed to it thinking his services gratis. When the party was seated at a table he ordered a cup of champagne. Fawling insisted on paying the bill when it came, but it did not come. Finally Fawling said:

"Monsieur, I think we had better pay for our supper and go; madame is getting tired."

"In five minutes," returned the other, looking at a clock. "I must go at 12 to prepare for my operation."

"What—an operation so early in the morning?"

"The law prescribes the hour."

Mrs. Fawling looked at her husband miserably. There was something about this strange man that repelled her. But she held her ground till midnight, when monsieur, bidding them good night, departed.

"Waiter, the bill!" said Fawling as soon as their guide had gone.

"There is no bill."

"Why so?"

"Monsieur de Paris never pays. All is free to him."

"Who is Monsieur de Paris? He said he was a surgeon."

"A surgeon! Yes, he is a surgeon in a specialty. He cuts off the heads of criminals."

Mrs. Fawling shuddered. "Come," she said; "let us get away at once."

Turks Picnic at Home.

"Simple life" picnicking in the house is thoroughly understood by the Turk. The real old fashioned Turk indeed, as Sir Charles Elliot shows, reveals his inherited nomadic instincts by treating a house merely as a place to camp in. Rooms are not assigned to special purposes. "You sit in a room and write on your hand. When you are hungry you call. A little table is brought in, and you eat. When you want to go to bed a pile of rugs is laid in a corner, and you go to sleep on it." Then a scene at Yildiz—secretaries working in a red plush room furnished in European style. "Some were sitting curled up in arm-chairs, with their inkpots poised perilously on the arms, the idea of leaving a writing table never having come into their heads. Some were squatting on the floor, eating with their fingers off bread-dishes placed on a low table. One was taking a siesta in the corner."—St. James' Gazette.

Disabled His Mind.

At a London theater the other night, when a well known actress was weeping bitterly on the stage, a sensitive countryman burst into tears and wept audibly.

"What are you making that row for?" asked a neighbor.

"I'm thinking of that poor creature's distress," was the reply.

"What? Don't you know she's paid £20 a week to do that?"

"Oh? Twenty pounds a week! Do you mean to say her crying's not real?"

"Of course not."

"Then all I've got to say is she's a despicable hussy." And up he got and went out. "Twenty pounds a week," he was muttering as he moved into the street, "and to kink up all that row too."—London Globe.

Diseases They Have in Scotland.

Has Scotland still its own word for measles? Dean Ramsay relates that in 1775 Mrs. Betty Muirhead, who kept a boarding school for young ladies in the Trongate of Glasgow, asked a new pupil whether she had had smallpox. "Yes, ma'am," replied the girl. "I've had the smallpox, the mumps, the blubs, the way, the kinkshot and the fever, the branks and the worm." "Smallpox" and even the vague "fever" might not worry an English reader, but it needs a glossary to interpret the others—in order as measles, nettlesrash, itch, whooping cough, mumps and tooth ache.—London Tatler.

Counterthrust.

"A very good retort!" said a senator in an argument. "A very good retort indeed! It reminds me of Weeks."

"Weeks and his wife were quarreling."

"The night you proposed," said Mrs. Weeks, with a hard, scornful laugh, "you acted like a fish out of water."

"Weeks sighed."

"But a very cleverly landed fish," he said, in a musing voice.—Washington Star.

The Worm Turns.

Mrs. Gnages—You miserable worm! Out of my way! You're always kicking because I want to get out somewhere!

Mr. Gnages—Now, look here—

Mrs. Gnages—Not a word from you, now! Come here and hook up my dress!

Mr. Gnages—Now, look here, Jennie, if you mean to imply I'm a hokworm I'm darned if I stand it.—St. Louis Republic.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Surprising Cure of Stomach Trouble.

When you have trouble with your stomach or chronic constipation, don't imagine that your case is beyond help just because your doctor fails to give you relief. Mrs. J. Standa, Plainfield, N. J., writes, "For over six months I have been troubled with my stomach. Everything I ate upset it terribly. One of Chamberlain's advertising circulars came to me. After reading a few of the letters from people who had been cured by Chamberlain's Tablets, I decided to try them. I have taken nearly three-fourths of a box and can now eat almost anything I want." For sale by all druggists.

Dysentery is always serious and often a dangerous disease, but it can be cured. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy has cured it even when malignant and fatal. For sale by all dealers.
