Queer Resemblances.
That persons who live together for a very long period not only acquire the same mannerisms, but grow a strong facial resemblance, is an established fact. But it is little known that the same condition often exists from mistress and servant being associated together for a long period of years. There is usually a strong desire on the part of most servants to ape their mistresses, and this, added to the fact of constant nearness, often extends to facial resemblances.

There are in a small town in New York state two unusual instances of this kind. Two widows live there, each of whom has been attended by a woman servant for more than forty years. In both cases the servants have become so like their mistresses that they are often mistaken for them, and their cases have attracted attention far and near. Their voices over the telephone are so alike that friends of the women have given up this method of communication.—New York Sun.

Words That Speak.
Bang—a sudden noise like that from a gun is the definition given by the dictionary. But the explanation is fogging and futile, for a "bang" is—well, what better describes it than that simple word itself?

So many of our most expressive words seem similarly to have sprung from a desire to form with the lips a sound mimicking the thing described. Why waste words on a definition of the word "splash," for example? You hear all the abrupt, restless heaving of the waters in that one word.

And does even a baby need to be told what "buzz" means when a blue-bottle is leading a forlorn hope against the window?

"Tinkle," "whistle," "whine," "gurgle," "cackle," "tch"—these are only a few of our other eloquently descriptive words.—London Answers.

Not His Place to Laugh.
Hickory Wood, the pantomime writer, used to tell an amusing story of a theatrical manager who once shared his box at a provincial pantomime. When the principal comedian entered and did his best the manager, with a scowl on his brow, leaned over to Mr. Wood and remarked, "I want to engage that man for next Christmas in my production."

"Do you think he is funny?" Mr. Wood asked.

"Screeningly funny," returned the manager.

"Then why don't you laugh?" asked Mr. Wood.

"Laugh when he's got his eyes on me?" replied the manager. "And every smile means that he'll ask another favor a week."—London Telegraph.

A Good Investment.

HOME DAIRY

We wish to announce that after the first of November our price for milk will be $1.00 for thirteen quarts and $1.00 for twenty-two pints. Just a word of what we are doing for the money we ask.

We keep the best cows, housed in a new barn, on a cement floor which is cleaned, swept and washed each day. Every cow's udder is thoroughly washed before each milking. The cows are carried and kept clean. The milk is milked in new pails which have sanitary, inside soldered seams. When milked the milk is taken to the milk house and thoroughly aerated and the animal heat and smell taken off of it, then filled into glass bottles with sanitary caps that are never used but once.

In the past we have tried to furnish the best product at the cheapest price at which we could run, and in the future will do the same. Our product costs us more to produce now so we will have to make the raise.

Respectfully,
S. L. JOHNSTON, Prop.
