Injunction Suit Against Bul.

Vancouver, Wash., Jan. 28—Bud Anderson was made defendant in an injunction suit filed here yesterday afternoon, in which the court is asked to issue a writ preventing the fighter from disposing of any of his property in this county pending the settlement of a suit for $5000 damages brought against him in the Clackamas County courts for the alleged alienation of the affections of the former wife of Guy H. Pace. The latter secured a divorce from his wife recently and Anderson was named as correspondent in the action. The suit in the Clackamas county court was filed on Jan. 26.

Fail to Follow the Law

Salem, Or., Jan. 29—Discovering that 13 County Clerks have failed to observe the registration law requiring the scanning of their registration lists weekly, Secretary of State Olcott has written them asking that hereafter they comply with it. Upon the Secretary of State devolves the duty of mailing the campaign pamphlets for the several political parties, and if the lists are not furnished promptly he will be handicapped in estimating the number required, and also in getting the pamphlets to the voters. The total registration on file with the Secretary of State now is but 11,000.

Electric Sparks

Sir Ernest Shackleton, while regretting that there are no undiscovered poles, feels that it will not have anything to find one of the old ones again once more.

In the new Hebrides a baby island has been born, which fact speaks volumes for the size of the storms that have their habitat thereabouts.

Since Rockefeller saw fit to praise the sun, that modest luminary has hidden its charms behind clouds with singular persistence.

Journalistic courtesy, plain discretion, military censorship or something else prevents the publication of the presidential golf scores.

Among the Mexican experts listed in the new year books one might well find generals and capitalists.

If old Culebra will stop that sliding we can begin to shoot ships across Panama.

Menace of the Crowded Car.

A narrow car, seats filled with persons attempting to read newspapers while the car sways and jolts along its way, aisles jammed with men and women, boys and girls and tiny children swaying and rubbing one against the other, coughing and sneezing, pushing and pressing—what a sight for a progressive age; what a sermon for the moralist; what a despair for the student of public health and hygiene!

Endless problems are presented by this picture, seen daily in nearly every American city. Most important is the menace to health from the thousands of bacteria hidden in the throats of diseased men and women and sprayed directly into a stagnant air, moist and unmoving in the absence of sufficient means of ventilation. Virulent organisms are inhaled into the throats and lungs of tired workers and tiny babes, who form an excellent host for their quick cultivation. The fare for the ride is small, but the cost cannot be estimated in terms of dollars and cents. —Journal of the American Medical Association.

Borrowing Money.

"When one goes to the bank," we are told, "he obligates himself to the bank. It may be only by a slip of paper for payment of some dollars of money, but there is danger it will not end there." The inference is that when one borrows money he assumes an obligation more than to repay the principal and interest, which is doubtless often the case, but, assuming the necessity of borrowing, it is doubtful if the transaction ordinarily creates as much obligation to the bank as it does to some accommodating friend. For a bank the loaning of money constitutes its regular line of business. It buys and sells credits and is supposed to loan on purely commercial considerations. If a person, however, borrows from friends or relatives, the loan is always regarded as a personal favor calling for favors in return in addition to repayment.

Moral: If you must borrow money and in doing so want to incur the least possible "obligation," borrow from the bank.—Omaha Bee.

No Lack of Mustard.

It was an inconvenient time to want mustard—Sunday at an hour when all the delicatessens in the neighborhood were closed.

"Still, it is not so bad as if it were pepper or salt or vinegar we need," the woman said, "because we can get mustard at the drug store."

When the man went out to see about it sure enough she was right. Mustard in any quantity desired could be obtained at the corner drug store.

"We have to keep it for plasters," the clerk explained. "Notwithstanding the advance in medical science and newfangled methods of treating disease hosts of people still pin their faith to the homely mustard plaster as a panacea for all fleshly ills, and no drug-gist can afford to let the stock run out."—New York Times.

Curious Signs.

A notable sign on one of Boston's busiest streets bears the remarkable legend, "Cole & Wood, Dealers in Wood and Coal," the members of this firm evidently having an unusually fine perception of the "poetical fitness of things."

In High street, Clifton, is a sign "Miller and Modest."

A New York lawyer named Doolittle once unwittingly entered into partnership with a barrister named Steele, but a singular lack of clients soon became painfully noticeable, and it was found advisable to dissolve the name of the firm proving altogether too suggestive to prospective patrons.

"U. Catchem & L. Chestem, Attorneys at Law," was a sign that had to be taken down for a similar reason.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A Human Wall.

An ingenious method of preventing the escape of convict prisoners without resort to bolts and bars is used by the Dutch authorities in New Guinea. Here some of the most dangerous criminals are confined, but they make no attempt to escape, although there is no wall around the prison. The explanation is simple—the penal settlement is surrounded on every side by cannibal settlements.

Fearful!

"You will find this fellow a tough proposition," warned the merchant. "Only one man has ever been able to collect from him."

"Don't worry," replied the bill collector, with a grin; "anything that has been done can be done again."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Memory.

"Now, Elsie," said the schoolteacher to a small pupil, "can you tell me what memory is?"

"Yes, ma'am," replied Elsie. "Memory is the thing people use when they want to forget what they don't want to remember."—Chicago News.

Tourists Help Some.

Tourist—I am amazed that you can manage to live, my good woman, when your live stock is so scanty. Peasant—Oh, it's not very difficult. You see, I have a cow, a goose, a dozen fowls and in summer a couple of tourists.—Fliegende Blätter.

Discreet Silence.

The man who said "Speech is silver, but silence rightly used is what makes golden weddings possible," expressed a truth that many young couples never seem to grasp.

Weeds and bad habits are about the only things that grow and grow quick without any help.
