TWO STRANGE WOMEN.

What They Would Do if Cleopatra Got Her For a Night.

Edna Ferber writes a fiction story in the American Magazine in which the principal character is Emma McChesney, a traveling saleswoman. On one of her trips she took her son with her, a boy of seventeen. This boy had to spend the night with a stranger in a country hotel. Next morning his mother asked him about his roommate. The boy knew very little, not even the name of the man with whom he stayed, who upon Emma McChesney broke out as follows:
"Men are the grossest creatures. This chap occupied the same room with you last night and you don't even know his name. Funny! If two strange women had found themselves occupying the same room for a night they wouldn't have got to the kitchen and back half stage before they would know not only each other's name, but they'd have tried on each other's hats, swapped corset cover patterns, found mutual friends living in Dayton, O., taught each other a new Irish crochet stitch, showed their family photographs, told how their married sister's little girl nearly died with swollen glands and divided off the mirror into two sections to paste their newly washed handkerchiefs on. Don't tell me men have a genius for friendship."

An Easy Choice.

"You must choose between us," shouted Rinx. "You can't have both. When that dressmaker was last in this house I vowed that she should never come again. I have had all I'm ever going to have of being under the same roof with two semi nutty women and requiring a rake every morning to get the odd pieces of cloth out of my clothes. I shall never again sit at my meals hearing the whir of that cursed sewing machine and listening to a lot of plaited, ruffled, cut bias and flounced talk in which I have no chance to join. The day that woman comes I go. Make your decision now. Do you choose your husband or your dressmaker?"
With limpid eyes the lady looked upon her husband. Then she breathed a sigh and said:
"Well, dear, if you must go what can I say?"—New York Globe.

Distinction.

"Don't you believe women can keep a secret?"
"Of course they can keep a secret."
"Well, I'm glad one man will admit it."
"Women can keep a secret. The trouble is they won't."—San Francisco Chronicle.

Quote Natural.

Bertha: And do you really believe that a woman always turns to the last page first when she picks up a book? Percy: Well, I have no reason to doubt it. I know it is the nature of the fair sex to want the last word!—London Telegraph.

Willing to Help.

Father (to his old friend's pretty daughter)—Goodby, my dear! I won't kiss you—I have such a cold. His Son (with alacrity)—Can I do anything for you, father?

A Man's Vote.

To request an honest man to vote according to his conscience is superfluous; to request him to vote against his conscience is an insult. Gladstone.

That's Different.

She—I hate big-neck patterns for cloth dresses. He—That's the pattern of the last check I sent your dress maker for them.—Exchange.

It Did.
In "Bohemian Days in Fleet Street" the following story of Charlie Williams, the war correspondent, appears:
"Charlie Williams could have given Baron Munchausen a stone and a beating. He spoke with a rasping North of Ireland accent, and his campaign anecdotes gained greatly by the stolid matter of fact manner in which they were narrated. I recall now one of his campaign reminiscences. It is a quaint experience of a correspondent under fire.
"I had got under cover of a big bowlder and had tethered my horse beside me. I was just munchin' a beskit, when a shell burst on the rock an' shot the nosebag right off my charger. He had shoved his oild head out of cover.
"And you? asked Pearce.
"I just went on munchin' my beskit."
"But," suggested Dunning, "if the shell took away the nosebag it ought to have carried away the beast's head as well."
"It did," replied Williams, with the utmost sang froid."

Watch the Clock.

If the passion for efficiency accomplishes nothing more it will—indeed, it has already—unset one of the most sacred tenets that altruistic employers ever put into the constitution and by-laws for the observance of employees. That tenet is, Don't watch the clock. It was hoped, of course, that if employees could be made to forget the clock they might also forget to go home at the expiration of the time for which they were paid.
Efficiency now makes the revolutionary demand that you should never take your eyes from the clock. To be a topnotcher in efficiency you must go even further. You must get a stop watch with split second hands and make sure that each minutest division of time has assigned to it a precise and particular action, being or state. Watch the clock, my boy—watch the clock if you want to make a success in this world.—Ellis O. Jones in Lippincott's.

The Mullingers and the Hapsburgs.

The Mullingers are one of those old Swiss families concerning whom my friend Dr. Curti, distinguished Swiss national historian and director of the Frankfurter Zeitung, recently told me the following amusing incident, writes a correspondent.
Years ago a Mullinger was one of the staff of the Swiss legation at Vienna. On being presented to the Emperor Francis Joseph he blurted out his pleasure at making the acquaintance of his majesty, which pleasure, he added, was all the greater since "in times gone by the Hapsburgs were mere retainers of the Mul hurgers."
"To that case," the emperor is said to have replied, "I think you will admit that my family has got on better in the world than as welfer gebracht than yours"—London Chronicle.

Try It on the Dog.

The farmer looked at the stranger and shook his head.
"What d'ye call yourself?" he asked.
"The Orphan of the barnyard," replied the caller.
"What'n Tophet is that?" demanded the agriculturist.
The stranger smiled.
"A college professor has declared that hens will not lay at certain seasons unless they are amused. In the man who sits on a barnyard fence and amuses them. See, here is my mouth organ, and here is my tambourine. I play and sing and crack jokes until the hens roll over in sheer delight and all for 50 cents an hour."
The farmer eyed him moodily.
"I wonder," he said, "how your talents would impress the dog? Here Rover!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

One Way to Cure "Nerves."

We remember hearing of an Englishman, a distinguished soldier, who was naturally a very nervous boy, who had cured himself of the terrors through reading Lever's novels. The manner in which Lever treats of all bodily perils as a kind of joke introduced him to a new philosophy, the made any exaggeration of the advantages of bodily safety seem not only morbid, but ridiculous.—London Spectator.

Washing Day in Sicily.

The Sicilians have the reputation of not washing themselves overfrequently, but if they are remiss in this respect they more than make up for it by washing their garments—washing, in fact, being a perennial occupation among the women. The songs of the women folk as they scrub the clothes of their husbands and children outside the doors of their homes, if living in a city, or in some brook or running stream if living in the country, are a noticeable feature of lower class Sicilian life. The long spikes on the prickly pear leaves and aloe plants make splendid natural pegs on which to dry the clothes, and in all the rural districts you will see them thus utilized, but if they do not happen to be sufficiently handy the clothes are often stretched out upon the mountainside to dry. The occupation and recreation of most of the poorer women may be summed up in three words—washing and gossip.—Wide World Magazine.

Strange Truth.

They say that one will go where it is sent. It appears to be always sent after the girl with a rich father. Why is it thuswise?—New Orleans Phrygane.
