INDUSTRIAL REVIEW (Continued from page one.)

Legislation adopted resolutions opposing freak laws and policies tending to interfere with industries. The first unit of the Beaver State Motorcar factory at Gresham is completed and machinery being installed. The Springfield provision Co. will establish a $40,000 packing plant. As a result of a made-in-Oregon banquet at Albany, $22,10 was raised to beautify an old cemetery—payrolls help even the dead. The Danson basket factory at Bay City has several large contracts from florists. A company is forming at The Dalles to manufacture high class sculptural and monumental work. A Portland hardware and steel firm is building large docks at Astoria. The Labor Commission of British Columbia opposes a minimum wage and says an eight hour law must be a national affair for all Canada. The Manufacturers' Association of Portland is about equally divided on the question of accepting insurance under the Compensation act of the last legislature. The Roseburg winter broccoli industry promises to be a success, as good reports have been received of Chicago shipments. The red alder wood is interesting manufacturers of clothspins and that industry may be established in Oregon. Pendleton is erecting a beautiful Catholic church of Baker stone. Molalla is to have a $25,000 concrete high school. A soap factory at Marshfield will turn out one ton per day with five persons employed. The Dornbecher Furniture Co. will erect a six story building on the site of their present factory. A $35,000 steel bridge is to be erected at Kellogg, Douglas county. An electric pump will drain 800 acres of Lake Wapato, Washington County, for the onion industry. A summer resort hotel is to go up on Teitcoos like Lane county. A new woodenware factory is in successful operation at Sellwood. Lents will have a modern broom factory. Beaverton will have a brickyard.

Montenegro's Stones. Montenegro has, after all, some reason to be grateful for its stones. "It is in these stones," writes William Miller, "that the Black mountain has found its best fortifications—for artificial forts it has none—and it was not till the time of the present prince (now King Nicholas) that the Napoleon idea of making a road across the country was carried out. Even now it is not by any means certain that this improved means of communication will not be a source of danger in the future."

Snakes Fear This Bird. Snakes in South Africa fear the secretary bird and will even crawl away from its shadow. This bird devours snakes and can easily kill a reptile twice its size. He is unfortunate and on the road to ruin who will not do what he can, but is ambitious to do what he cannot.—Goethe. Spiteful. "Do you know, Mayme, I had the hardest work in the world to keep Mr. Smith from proposing?" "I dare say you had to some other girl."—Baltimore American.

Wistaria and Wisteria. Ernest H. Wilson, the distinguished naturalist, has a good laugh on the botanical "sticklers." Incidentally he has put in the wrong no end of writers in books, newspapers and periodicals, not to mention the creator of one of the most fashionable colors of recent years for women's apparel. It is all on account of one of the most gorgeous of flowers which Japan and China have ever sent to this country—the wisteria. Before I am snapped up on my spelling of a word we are in the habit of pronouncing that way, but spelling wistaria, I will say that right here is where Mr. Wilson has caught the botanists and the rest of the world napping. Although the magnificent vine whose long purple or white racemes are one of the glories of springtime in the northeastern part of the United States was named after Dr. Wistar of the old Philadelphia family, there was a slip up in the spelling. Christened wisteria when it was introduced it must so stand for ever according to inviolable botanical law. The same is true of the stewartia—it should be properly stuartia.—Spur.

Playing Cricket by Sound. Pupils of a school for the blind in England play cricket by sound. With a wicker ball, in which is contained a bell, the bowler prepares to attack the wicket. When a reporter visited the school the boys were practicing their game. "Play!" shouted the bowler, and in reply came the batsman's "Right ho." On hearing this the bowler knew in which direction to send the ball. His fast underhand went straight for the wicket, and the batsman, judging by the tinkling bell, knew when to hit. "I know exactly how far to run," he said afterward, "because there is a rat at the bowler's end which I feel with my bat." "The fielders," said the head master of the school, "have the most difficult part to play. But if the ball touches their chests the batsman may as well consider himself out, for immediately a fielder feels the touch of the ball his arms fold around it with amazing rapidity."—London Cor. New York Times.

Verse Mistaken For Poetry. It is curious how persistent the belief is that rhyme constitutes poetry. J. A. Stewart quotes a stanza from a battle hymn by Burns and inquires whether it is mediocre and how much of it depends on dialect. It does not depend on dialect, and it is not mediocre, but it is not poetry; it is rhetorical verse. The lines: A fig for those by laws protected; Liberty's a glorious feast; Courts for cowards were erected, Churches built to please the priest, have not the faintest suggestion of poetry; they merely make a terse statement in rhyme. To most people everything that rhymes is a "piece of poetry," even to "Thirty days has September" and other jingles of the kind. No definition of poetry will help. The only true knowledge of the matter comes by instinct.—London Chronicle.

Castle Under the Sea. Among certain of the Japanese there is a belief that somewhere under the sea there is a wonderful castle in which the beautiful queen of the fishes resides. Sometimes they think this castle rises to the surface and is visible to mortal eyes—a belief that probably had its origin in the phenomenon of the mirage. When the castle appears, the superstitious believe, representatives of all the finny tribes hasten to it to pay homage to their ruler. Some time ago, in honor of the "fishy" queen and her subjects, the fishermen of Futami made a number of gigantic fish of canvas and bamboo, painted in gorgeous colors, which were towed in procession through the water, enormous crowds watching the curious spectacle from the shore.—Wide World Magazine.

The Goose. The goose, which for some unknown reason has become an emblem of idleness, but which is really a wise bird of good habits and one of the most profitable for the farmer, was probably the first fowl to be domesticated by man. Homer, 1,200 years before the Christ era, speaks of his geese, in which he was greatly interested, and the hieroglyphics of Egypt prove that at his time they had been tamed for centuries.

Banking in England. The system of credit in England is different from that in this country, and the mere fact that a man has an account in a bank serves to give him standing. One cannot open an account with a bank in England merely by carrying money to the bank and depositing it. He must have two first class references before a bank will accept his account, and when reference is given it means that the person giving it would endorse or stand for the person to whom it is given. A reference in England means more than a mere phrase. Checks on banks in England cannot be obtained for the mere asking, and a man must have an account in order to get checks from any bank. They cannot be picked up on bank counters or in public places. Private accounts in English banks are not accepted unless they are paid for, the general charge being $50 a year. There are one or two banks in England which discriminate so carefully in the accounts they accept that when a person is fortunate enough to be permitted to open an account with them he can get credit in any city in England or on the continent of Europe.

There is one body that knows more than any body, and that is everybody.—Folley and.

Unconscious Memory. The memory of sleepwalkers is occasionally prodigious under the influence of the dominating impulse that moves them. There is an instance of a poor and illiterate basket maker, who was unable to read or write, yet in a state of sleep he would preach fluent sermons, which were afterward recognized as having formed portions of discourses he was accustomed to hear in the parish church as a child more than forty years before. Quite as strange a case of "unconscious memory" is referred to by Dr. Abercrombie. A girl given to sleepwalking was in the habit of imitating the violin with her lips, giving the preliminary tuning and scraping and flourishing with the utmost fidelity. It puzzled the physician a good deal until he ascertained that when a child she lived in a room adjoining a fiddler who often performed on his violin in her hearing.—Pearson's Weekly.

A Faint Hearted Post. Samuel Rogers, the English poet, whose house in London was noted as a literary center, was very fond of the society of ladies and was a great favorite with them. Yet he never married, and in his latter years he used to regret not having done so. Rogers' "nearest approximation to the nuptial tie" was with a girl whom he thought to be the most beautiful he had ever seen. At the end of the London season she said to him at a ball "I go tomorrow to Worthing." He did not go with her. Some months afterward, being at Ranelagh, he saw that the attention of every one was drawn toward a large party that had just entered, in the center of which was a lady leaning on the arm of her husband. Stepping forward to see this wonderful beauty, he found it was his love. She merely said, "You never came to Worthing."
