The Mysterious Stories

By EVERETT J. MARKLE

I am a man of artistic taste, but, having taken up business, I have felt the necessity of finding something to occupy and divert my mind during my leisure hours. I began writing stories. After amusing myself at this work for awhile I constructed a story that I thought pretty good and tried it on a magazine. To my surprise, it was accepted. I sent out more and was rewarded with more acceptances.

When I came to be troubled with insomnia my story writing furnished me with occupation during hours of wakefulness. I have written many a story or part of a story between 1 and 4 in the morning. I boarded with a lady, Mrs. Stoughton, and her daughter, Kate. I may admit in passing that when a man boards with a lady who has a daughter, especially if that daughter is attractive, he is likely to put a matrimonial rope around his neck. At any rate, an affair was brewing between Kate Stoughton and myself. She used to twist me for sitting up in the middle of the night scribbling, for I didn't admit that I was troubled with insomnia. But Kate was always joking me, and anything she said was acceptable.

One evening I went up to my room carrying a magazine with me to read during my evening awake. Turning over the leaves, I came to a story by some one who had the same name as myself. I read the story, and it seemed to me as if I might have dreamed it myself. But our mental faculties are very subtle, and it occurred to me that my seeming connection with it might have come from an infinitesimally small period of suspended animation, at the awakening from which I fancied I had seen the story before.

But this did not explain my name being used as the author of the stories I was puzzled over this, especially because I was not familiar with any magazine writer of my name. True it is not an uncommon one, and doubtless there were other scribblers bearing it, but I knew none such, especially with my initials.

I didn't think much of this at the time, for my business, which had been running so smoothly, began to give me a lot of trouble, and I was finally on the verge of closing it out. I was hanging by my fingers, so to speak when I saw another story with my name to it, and, strange to say, there was the same faint dreamy knowledge of it that had pertained to the former one. The fellow's stories evidently pleased magazine readers, for they began to appear quite often. I read every one I came across, and my astonishment grew with each, for there was none but reminded me of something I had heard or read or dreamed.

Then it occurred to me to go to some of the magazine offices and find out who the writer was. I went first to an editor I knew best.

"Hello," he said, "you're just the man I want to see. I sent a check to you the other day for one of your stories, and the letter inclosing it came back unopened. Have you taken to scribbling for no pay?"

"I haven't sent you a story for months."

"Not 'The Moonshiner'?"

"No." This was one of the other fellow's I had read.

The editor looked at me, puzzled. Then I told him what had happened. He had supposed the stories with my name attached to them came from me, and he had no explanation of the mystery to offer. He handed me a fat check, but I declined it and went to see other editors in whose magazines the other scribbler's stories had appeared. They had all supposed that I was the author of the manuscripts sent in, and all had credited me with the amount due—in all more than a thousand dollars.

Now, I had got through my business troubles, all but a thousand dollar note coming due in a few days. All I had to do was to accept checks in payment for my stories and I would be "out of the woods." But I had not written the stories and had no right to take pay for them. Besides, if I did so and the real author turned up I would be liable to prosecution for swindling.

I was in a condition of mind where a man needs to confide in some one. That evening I saw Kate Stoughton and told her the whole story, including the fact that the use of a thousand dollars would save my business.

"Then go to 'morrow," she said, "and draw the money from the magazines. One morning and another at intervals. One night she saw you writing and spoke to you. You didn't answer. You were writing in your sleep or some similar condition. I read the stories and it occurred to me that it would be a good joke to send them out to magazines. I did so and they were all accepted. In some instances letters came for you from the magazines. Some I opened and found checks enclosed. I presented the envelopes and returned them. Such is my confession. I am sorry now that I didn't give them to you."

I was so delighted at having the money to sell me through in my business affairs that I threw my arms around her neck and thereby put the matter of matrimony that I spoke of around my own.

But how I wish the story were still a mystery to me and to the box ever yet been able to give me any explanation.

History as She Is Wrote. A text book of history, written by one Hajavski, for Russian schools, contains some extraordinary statements, among them these, which the London Star translates: "Louis XVI. was a peaceable and gentle monarch, who, in the course of his long reign, showed himself particularly skillful in finding expert ministers of finance. Loved and honored by his people, the great monarch died suddenly after a glorious reign as the result of a fit of apoplexy. He was succeeded by his son, Louis XVII, who was obliged to conduct several wars, wherein the captain of his hosts, the royal marshal, Napoleon Bonaparte, conquered a great part of Europe for his king. Napoleon, however, abused his power and made a public attempt to rebel against his liege lord and to compass his own ambitious ends. Under the leadership of Alexander I, King and autocrat of all the Russias, the general was deposed, deprived of all his honors and dignities and all claims to pension. He was banished to St. Helena."

Often the Case. "My wife believes that what is to be will be." "Well?" "And she believes it will all be my fault." Kansas City Journal.
