A True Prodigy.
On June 27, 1725, died Christian Helms. He was only just five, but was already famous. Within a few hours of his birth he could talk and with sense. At ten months he could talk with ease on most subjects; at twelve months he was thoroughly conversant with the Old Testament and in a month made himself equally conversant with the New. Conversant with things sacred, he turned to things secular and at thirty months could answer any ordinary question in geography and history, ancient as well as modern, and when he was taken on a visit to the court of Denmark he conversed in Latin and French. He was then four. But nature had not balanced his prodigious mental dexterity with a satisfactory bodily one, for his death at five years of age was due to a change in his food from milk to meat.—London Tatler.

Antioch.
Among the sacred cities of the east Antioch holds a high place, for it was here that the first Christian church was founded. It was, moreover, the center from which St. Paul conducted his missionary campaigns to convert the gentiles. In those days Antioch was a prosperous and thriving city, boasting of a population of half a million souls, while splendid Roman palaces and villas dotted the banks of the river Orontes, which flows through the town. Today, says the Wide World Magazine, it is a sleepy, old world place, occupying scarcely one-tenth of its ancient area, and certainly possessing none of its former glory. Nevertheless it is in many ways a delightfully quaint and picturesque eastern city, with narrow, tortuous streets, every other house in which appears to possess an architectural style of its own.

The Middle Finger.
Why is the middle finger of our hands so much longer than the little finger, and why is the thumb so stubby and short when it would be much more convenient if it were longer? One has to go way back not only centuries of time to find the answer to this "Why is it?" In the history of mankind's beginnings we find that before man saw even the dawn of civilization he used his hands as well as his feet to walk. Now if you will spread your fingers on the floor as if you were going to stand on them you will see what a good arrangement it was to have the fingers of different lengths; they give a well balanced support that fingers of equal length could not give. So it was to help prehistoric men and not man of the twentieth century that nature gave us fingers of varying length.—Wisconsin State Journal.

Jam, From "Jamaica."
Jam seems to take its name from Jamaica and is comparatively a modern luxury. Galt in his "Annals of the Parish" states that the fashion of jam making was introduced into Scotland about 1750, when berry bushes were planted by some of our young men that had been sailors coming from Jamaica, and the condiment was valued in the first place chiefly as "an excellent medicine for a sore throat." A writer in Home's "Everyday Book," in 1828, deplored the fact that jam could not be "purchased at the shops as other articles of consumption are."—London Mail.

To The Public

Having disposed of my interest in the Bank of Jacksonville to her stock holders in order to enter other lines of business, I take this opportunity to express my sincere thanks to the many patrons of the bank, and the public generally, for their confidence and patronage of the bank for the past five years during my connection with this good institution. I also wish to request all my friends to continue their patronage with the bank and I reassure you that you will receive the same courteous treatment in the future as it has been our endeavor in the past.
Sincerely yours
Benj. M. Collins

The officers and directors of the Bank of Jacksonville regret to announce at this time the resignation of B. M. Collins as cashier, which has been handed in to take effect Oct. 6th, 1914. During his incumbency he has worked honestly and faithfully for the success of the bank, and we deeply regret his decision in the matter. To Mr. Collins, the officers and directors wish to express their appreciation of his efforts in behalf of the institution and wish him every success in his new undertaking.

LAST THREE PRESIDENTS OPPOSED TO PROHIBITION

PRESIDENT WILSON SAYS:
"I am in favor of Local Option. I am a thorough believer in LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT and believe that every self-governing community which constitutes a social unit should have the right to CONTROL the matter of the regulation or the withholding of licenses."

WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT
Ex-President, Statesman, Jurist and Professor, in an address on Civic Duty, said:
"Nothing is more foolish, nothing more utterly at variance with sound policy, than to enact a law which, on account of conditions surrounding the community, is incapable of enforcement. Such instances are presented by summary laws by which the sale of intoxicating liquors is prohibited under penalties in localities where the public sentiment . . . will not sustain the enforcement of the law."

THEODORE ROOSEVELT
Ex-President, Soldier, Explorer and one of the most remarkable leaders in the United States, is a strong champion of LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT and Home Rule. He has never raised his voice in behalf of statewide prohibition, and so he has suffered attacks from radical and hysterical prohibitionists. As between a man of Theodore Roosevelt's ability and standing and those who are the paid emissaries of professional propagandists, the voters of Oregon will not be slow in passing upon the wisdom and credibility of the witnesses.

With these three National Leaders agreed on the Issue of Prohibition, isn't it wisdom to follow their course?

Antics of Volcanoes.

Some curious antics are performed by volcanoes in action. On the island of Savil, in the Siamon group of the south Pacific, a fissure opened late one day in a cocoa plantation. An eruption took place immediately, devastating the whole island. After an eruption by Mount Taal in Luzon, Philippine Islands, five lakes, all of different colors, were left in the crater. Katmai, in Alaska, spread its volcanic dust around the world in less than a month. Mount Pelee thrust a rock plug through its crater nearly 2,000 feet high in a few days. The plug has since sealed until only the stump is left. Bandaisan, in Japan, blew its own head off and then belched streams of hot mud. When the island of Krakatoa, near Sumatra, was destroyed by volcanic shock the report of the explosion was heard 2,000 miles away. Cotopaxi, in Mexico, once broke loose so suddenly that the snow on its summit was scattered over the surrounding country as blocks of ice.—Kansas City Times.

The Potato Habit.

Potato eating has become a habit not because potatoes contain enough nourishment to carry on life, but because they are cheap, easy to prepare and bulky enough to fill up the stomach. The potato consists almost entirely of starch, and though this has a place in the diet it is not capable of building up strength and muscle. Constant reference is made to the hardness of colonists and early settlers. They were not raised on a potato diet, for the potato was a luxury as late as 1800, to be served with sugar, nutmeg and mace. It is a product of more recent years, part and parcel of the struggle to keep down the living expense at the cost of the body.

This does not mean that potatoes should be eliminated from the dietary, for like every other food they have a definite mission to fulfill, but they must be used with discretion and in proper combination. Excessive use brings an inevitable trail of anaemia, obesity and auto-intoxication.—Country Gentleman.

A Step Higher.

The Delegate—I tell you, sir, that the root of trouble of the educational system of this nation is the teacher. The Listener—But, say, ain't you a teacher yourself? The Delegate (indignantly)—A teacher, sir? Certainly not. I am an educator!—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Pretty Tranquil.

"I would like to lead a tranquil existence," said the troubled man of affairs.
"About how tranquil?" asked his hard worked secretary.
The other thought a moment. "Oh," he answered, "about as tranquil a life as a germ leads on a $1,000 bill."—Chicago News.

Deduction.

"Tell me what you eat, and I will tell you what you are," boasted an amateur sage.
"Well, I ate a Welsh rabbit and a lemon pie last night."
"You're simply a fool."—Kansas City Journal.

The Past.

"The past is dead," exclaimed the poet.
"Not half so dead as some people would like it to be," said the philosopher.—Philadelphia Record.

Sympathy.

Juror—We acquitted him out of sympathy. Friend—For his aged mother? Juror—Oh, no; for having such a lawyer.—Exchange.

The things that never happen are of ten as much realities to us in their effects as those that are accomplished.

Does Prohibition Fulfill Its Promises?

Thinking people of every religious creed and political belief should give earnest heed to the expressions of opinion from eminent divines, educators, editors, governors, judges, legislators, and others prominent in every walk of life, who have publicly voiced their sentiments concerning prohibition in words similar to these:

"Prohibition drives underground the mischief which it seeks to cure, making it more difficult to deal with the evil and impossible to regulate the trade." Bishop Hall, Vermont.
"Prohibition has been disastrous to the cause of temperance." Bishop Clark, Rhode Island.

These men are sincere and conscientious. They deplore drunkenness and cry against it as a great evil. Who, indeed, does not? Yet they know from observation and experience, that prohibition does not put a check upon intemperance but that, on the contrary, it gives rise to evils even greater than intemperance itself.
