Still Working for the Public

Mrs. Chris Ulrich is still beautifying the Jacksonville cemetery driveway. After years of labor in securing subscriptions from the residents of our village, she had the water placed in the City of the Dead. Laid some 1500 ft. of pipe, placed hydrants all over grounds, she being the sole superintendent and this last season laid some 400 ft. more of distributing pipe. She has still some money left so now she is ordering Scotch Broom set in between the trees on the driveway. She has accomplished every idea since she started out with the work with the assistance of the public, it has taken a great deal of labor and time, the public has donated—some persons very liberally while others have given nothing but discouragement; some even went so far as to say, "why the water will not run up hill, quit wasting the money." Now, the water is there all over the ground free to everybody at all times. Now is she not deserving of credit for the work accomplished? Look at the trees along the driveway; what a beautiful shade they will make and the Scotch Broom between the trees with their yellow bloom; Should not her work be held in everlasting memory by the people of Jacksonville and surrounding country, as 15 out of every 20 buried here are from all over the country, they come from all over the state. Let the good work go on. A Citizen Resolution No. 73.

BE IT RESOLVED BY THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF JACKSONVILLE: Section I. That whereas an Initiative Petition has been duly filed with the City Recorder demanding the submission to the voters of this City, for their adoption or rejection, the following proposed amendment to Section 23, Chapter III of the City Charter of the City of Jacksonville as adopted by the voters of said City on the 21st day of June, 1911, at a special election held for that purpose and proclaimed by the Mayor of said City on the 29th day of June, 1911, namely, that aforesaid section be amended to read as follows: "Section 23. The Black Bear.

It is the common idea that a black bear will hug people to death. This is, of course, a mistake. A bear almost invariably makes its attack by striking a stunning blow with the fore paw and tearing with its very formidable claws. A large black bear can strike a terrific blow and is capable of knocking down and mortally wounding a full grown caribou. When their enemy or prey is felled to the ground they usually bite them about the head and neck until death ensues. They are remarkable for the strength of their jaws and have been known to bite through the skull of a man. Many animals that can generally be counted on not to attack may do so when come upon suddenly, crowded, wounded or annoyed. The black bear is no exception. The more I see and study animals the more I am impressed with the fact that there is no fixed rule what the same species of animal will do under similar circumstances, as they seem to vary so much in mind and temperament as the individual. Although one might predict with a very good average of correctness, there would always be the exception.—"Big Game Fleets of America."

On Having the Blues.

If without any real cause of worry, says a writer in the Unpopular Review, you wake up two or three consecutive mornings feeling that the world is an unsatisfactory place probably you had better go to the doctor. He won't be apt to give you anything worse than rubarb and soda. You might even try it before going, and if it is a sunny day try to glory in it, out of doors if possible, and if it is a rainy day try to think how cozy it will be by the fire, or if you have to go to an office how good it will be to have a day for steady work, when clients and customers are not apt to come in. In similar vein Kipling prescribed for a case of the blues, which he referred to as "fame-dolls lump," you remember, common to "kiddies and grownups too." When the lump rests heavily upon you, said Mr. Kipling—Don't frown with a frown by the fire. But take a large hoe and a shovel also. And dig till you gently perspire.

Where Mirrors Are Forbidden.

The followers of Jean de Labadie still flourish in some parts of Holland the tenets of the Labadists forbid the use of mirrors as tending to foster vanity and a love of fine clothes. This self denying ordinance is all the more creditable, seeing that, next to the founder, the leading figure among the Labadists was a woman. When Jean de Labadie left the Reformed church and founded a sect of his own orthodoxy he made it impossible for him to find his flock Anna Maria van Schurloo came to the rescue and enabled the Labadists to settle at Woburn in Friesland. Her eloquent sermons brought many converts to the new faith, for she was a pioneer of women's rights. London Chronicle

China's Procession Would Be Endless.

The population of China has never been exactly ascertained. The 1906 census, taken some years ago, is said to yield a total of 410,000,000. Perhaps 500,000,000 would be a more nearly correct estimate, even that would be such a less than one-fifth of the human race. From this total it is easy to estimate that if the Chinese people were to march past a given point in single file the procession would never end. Long before the last of the 300,000,000 had passed by a new generation would have sprung up to continue the endless line. From "Civilization of China," by H. A. Giles.

Crape on the Door.

The custom of placing crape on the door of a house where there has been a recent death had its origin in the ancient English heraldic customs and dates back to the year 1100 A. D. At that period hatchments, or heraldic ensigns, were placed in front of houses when the nobility or gentry died. The hatchments were of diamond shape and contained the family arms quartered and covered with sable.

Reasonable.

The Boss—Take that suit at $10, and I'm losing money. Customer—Well, I'll take it; but how much are you losing? The Boss—Well, I'll tell you I paid $5 for it and I have had to store it, brush it, insure it and advertise it for ten years. Figure it out for yourself.—New York Globe.

Made Over.

"I'm all out of ketter," declared the typewriter man. "My arm feels loose, my back seems twisted, and my left leg is shaky. What would you advise?" "I think I'd get myself rebuilt," suggested the automobile manufacturer.—Kansas City Journal.

Cost of a Horse. It costs on an average $104.00 to raise a horse to the age of three years on the farms of Indiana and those of other states. This price has been carefully figured by experts of the department of agriculture, who based their figures on those furnished by 10,000 correspondents scattered throughout the country. New Mexico can raise horses cheap or than the other states, at an average price of $69.50. In Massachusetts the raising of colts is more expensive than in any other state, the average horse at three years representing an investment of $141.80.

Not to Be Repeated

Shakespeare's contention that "there was never a philosopher who could endure the toothache patiently" was disproved by Canon Liddon. After an experience that would have closed the mouths of most of us, Liddon found it possible to write to a friend: "I have been quite laid up with trouble with my few remaining teeth of which I had five taken out the day before yesterday. As only four remain this particular experience cannot be repeated in this present life." This is a classic instance of the triumph of philosophy over pain.—London Globe.

The Atlantic Coast.

The eastern edge of the North American continent is overflowed by the sea, and that is why the water near the coast is so shallow. To find the true edge of the great continental land mass one would have to travel something like eighty miles due eastward from New York.

Lincoln's Rules of Life.

I am not bound to win, but I am bound to be true; I am not bound to succeed, but I am bound to live up to the light that I have; I must stand with anybody who stands right, and stand with him while he is right and part from him when he goes wrong.—A. Lincoln

Geranium Oil.

Geranium oil is largely used in perfumery and is known as rose geranium, owing to the common practice of adding rose petals to the plants before distillation.
