Then Quit That

"You'll have to quit smoking," said the physician. "I don't smoke." "Then you'll have to quit drinking." "I don't drink." "Haven't you any habits?" "None at all, except taking medicine."

Fruit Packing Plant Burned

Salem, Or., Mar. 30.—Fire, the origin of which is unknown, destroyed the Drager Fruit Company's packing house at Trade and Church streets here today. The loss is estimated at $40,000 and the building is said to be partially insured. No decision has been reached as to whether or not a new packing house will be built.

He Was Lucky

"Is the editor in?" asked the man with the unbarbered hair and the shiny coat, as he fished a roll of paper from his pocket. "No," replied the office boy, "he has just gone out." "This is the third time I have called to see him," growled the caller, "and each time you have told me he has just gone out. What's the explanation?" "I don't know," answered the office boy, "but I guess he must have been born under a lucky star."—Lippincott's Magazine

Oats Shipped by Parcel Post

Vale, Or., April 1.—Two tons and a half of oats were shipped out of this city this week by parcel post for Riverside. The grain was in 50-pound sacks. The parcel post is used quite extensively in short range shipments to the interior and is proving an excellent aid to the interior farmer.

How The War Hit Him

"Madame," said the tattered and torn supplicant to the benevolent lady who answered his timid rap at the door "have you any old clothes you can spare for an unfortunate victim of the European war?" "I think I have, my poor man; but how does this happen? You cannot have been in this war surely." "No madam," humbly replied the sufferer; "but my wife has sent all my clothes to the Belgians—Harrisburg Star-Independent

When Nelson fell at Trafalgar he was only forty-seven years old and the French commander, Admiral Villeneuve, was only forty-two. The latter was a brilliant sailor, who had already fought against Nelson, and he thoroughly realized what the English tactics were going to be on this occasion. Indeed, he held a meeting of the captains of the allied fleet and laid out explained them. Nelson would not be said, form line of battle parallel with the allied line. "He will seek to envelop our line, surround our rear and overpower with groups of his vessels as many of ours as he can cut off." Still, although prepared for this form of attack, Villeneuve failed to resist it, and he was taken prisoner, bitterly regretting that no shot had dealt him the same fate as Nelson.—London Chronicle

Self-Belief the Key to Success.

Do you still believe in yourself? If so, you cannot become a failure. You can at worst only have failed to learn as yet the science of success, of which self-respect is the key. In the great gamble of life we can afford to lose everything but our self-respect. Money lost is little lost; friends lost, much lost; but self-respect lost, and all is lost. Self-belief is the husband of self-respect, just as self-respect is the mother of self-reliance. Believe in yourself and you will win through, for self-belief is the mainspring of human activity and the principal source of human improvement. It inspires you to do things. It teaches you to try again. The man who retains his belief in himself will never give up trying, and success is the reward of persistent effort. Self-reliance will pull us through many a struggle from which the coward flees in vain and in which the weak succumb. The ability to "get up again" is the reward of the self-reliant.—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Rules For Success at Golf.

Writing in the American Magazine, Jerome D. Travers calls Harry Vardon the greatest golf player he ever met and says the bulk of his success might be set down to these few simple rules: Control of temper. Refusing to worry over any bad lie or any hard luck. Playing easily within himself and never pressing. Playing always for the hole, even when 200 yards away. Studying his game and practicing at every opportunity. Making a point, even in practice, to follow all simple rules, such as keeping one's head still, looking at the ball, etc. Keeping the body under control until perfect timing is developed. Using an easy, natural upright swing that stays as long as possible in line with the intended flight of the ball.

Details.

Details are something beneath the notice of the majority. It requires a rare sort of mind to accord to them the proper importance. It is necessary for every great artist to understand details in order that he may know when they should be ignored. Gulliver discovered this interesting fact when he woke up one morning. The perfection of any masterpiece depends upon the strategic elimination of its details. Those who see only those things which lie between the little and the great see neither of these. It requires the same capacity of imagination to master details that it does to master immensities. To see big one must also be able to see little. Controlling events means controlling details. Nothing succeeds like details.—Life.

Heathen Hospitality.

African jungle people are not very particular concerning their food. One of our missionary women was down with an attack of fever some time ago. This was a source of sorrow to these poor, unlearned yet sympathetic natives, who in their own way are really compassionate and want to help. One of these "bush nannies" tried to express her sorrow because the "white-mummy missionary" was so ill. "After a time she left the station with a bright idea in her head and started for the jungle. A little later she returned with a large tropical leaf from one of the trees. Upon it were several big, crawling green worms, which she had caught and brought to the sick missionary. She thought they would be nice and tender for her to eat during her illness.—Christian Herald

What a Man Did.

Mrs. Subbitz—I wonder what's come over Harry. Instead of being cross, as usual, he started off happy and with a "ding like a bird" this morning. Nora (in new girth)—It's my fault, mum. I got the wrong package and gave him bird seed for breakfast food.—Woman's Home Companion

No Winner.

Sublime satisfaction in one's own powers must be a very delightful condition, but a celebrated English musician, Dr. Arne, who flourished in the first half of the seventeenth century, for once very wittily turned the tables on some singers of this type. He was asked to decide on the respective powers of two vocalists whose talents existed entirely in their own imaginations. After hearing them Dr. Arne said to one, "You are the worst singer I ever heard in my life." Then exclaimed the other, "I win!" "No," answered the just judge; "you can't sing at all."—Argonaut.

What She Didn't Say.

The young man should have gone home an hour before, but he was still lingering and making conversation. The girl was desperate. "Oh, I say, Miss Frances," he said, "would you rather say something and mean nothing than say nothing and mean something? We were discussing that this evening at dinner and left it undecided." And the girl never said a word.—Lippincott's.

Would Like to See It.

"I don't read it in de paper," said Uncle Raspberry, "dat some o' dese here 'flyin' machine gemen says a man kin do anything a bird kin." "That's what they say," said Aunt Chloe. "Well, when any o' 'em sees a man sit fas' asleep, holdin' on to a tree branch wif his feet, I sho' wishes dey'd call me to have a look."—Ladies' Home Journal.
