New York's Municipal Library.

There is one library owned and managed by the city of New York about which there is probably less known outside of the circles of the legal profession and students of municipal affairs than any other library in that town. And this, curiously enough, in spite of the fact that the volumes on its shelves are subpoenaed in court more than the general public knows anything about. This institution is the city library, in the city hall, and it has on its shelves 10,000 volumes. The official reason for this library's being is to furnish a complete and official record of the municipal affairs and history of the city of New York. From the viewpoint of the bibliophile or the historian the most valuable books in the library are the records of the town in the days when the Dutch ruled Manhattan and it was known as New Amsterdam. The old Dutch records consist of seven fat volumes covering the period between 1647 and 1674. - Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Life and Its Creations.

Creation is the way life's records of experience look from the outside. Every cell in your body is a moving picture film of life's experience. The soul of the film is indestructible life itself, and life knows it without eyes or ears. The body of this movie film self of you is the mere outward appearance of it. Bergson calls it the "scum" around the edges of the stream of life, and he says this "scum" grows thicker and thicker until finally the stream of life is choked and the cell is sloughed off. Then something happens to the body as a whole.

Life flows through its organized channels until it loses interest and slows down, the channels eventually accumulating enough scum to keep life from playing freely. Thereupon life drops the body, and goes playing somewhere else, while the body itself disintegrates to its original thought-ions, the "building blocks" of the eternal child which is life. - Nautilus.

Da Vinci's Career.

Leonardo da Vinci was a great Italian painter and sculptor, architect and civil and military engineer, a scientific inventor and a man of universal genius. He was born in Vinci, near Florence, in 1452. Two of his earlier productions are still extant - "The Adoration of the Magi" in the gallery of the Uffizi at Florence, and "The Virgin of the Rocks" in the British National gallery. His great painting of the "Last Supper" was finished in 1498. The original has been wholly defaced, but, judging from copies, this work is universally regarded as one of the greatest ever produced. In 1499 he painted his celebrated portrait of Mona Lisa del Giocondo. In 1507 he painted a Madonna and child.

His extant works are few, and some of those attributed to him are believed to have been executed by his pupils. He died May 2, 1519.

Italy's Ancestral Glories.

Three times has Italy ruled over Europe. She has sat on the political throne under the Caesars, on the ecclesiastical throne under the popes from Gregory the Great to Leo X, and on the intellectual throne of the renaissance. These things every Italian family remembers. Augustus Caesar and Trajan, Hildebrand and Innocent III, Dante and Petrarch, Michelangelo and Raphael, Galilei and Bruno are in his mouth like household words. The Italian does not consider himself and us as equals; he accepts, he believes in, modern democracy, but deep in his heart he is an aristocrat, haughtily proud of his long descent and his ancestral glories. When thinking of Italians one must always bear in mind that they are the most glorious past and that they are conscious of it to the quick. - Henry Dwight Sedgwick in Yale Review.

England's Great Seal.

The great seal of England is, says the London Chronicle, a more elaborate article than most people imagine. It costs about $3,500 to make it, and it consists of two heavy silver plates, in one of which is cut the die for the front of the seal and in the other that for the back. When the seal is to be affixed to a document a lump of wax is softened in hot water and cooled in cold water, after which it is placed between the two plates and pressed. It comes out in the shape of a disk, with an impression on each side.

Formerly there was an official attached to the seal who was quite as proud of his office as the lord chancellor was of his. That was "Chaffwax," whose sole business was to melt the wax and to take the impressions of the great seal as often as required. The writer remembers the last of the "Chaffwax" as a rosy cheeked old gentleman who lived long to enjoy the pension that a feudal country granted him for his important services. Those services are now performed by an unnamed subordinate in the chancellor's office.
