Echo of Sound.

An echo is a sound reflected from a distant surface. Sound is produced by waves or pulses of the air, and when those waves come in contact with a cliff or wall or other opposing surface they are reflected like light or heat, and the returning waves cause a repetition of the sound. The word echo is of Greek origin. According to ancient mythology, it was the name of a mountain nymph, daughter of the air and the earth. Echo was one of Juno's attendants, but her loquacity displeased Jupiter, so she was deprived of the power of speech by Juno and permitted to answer only when she was spoken to. Afterward Echo fell in love with a beautiful youth named Narcissus and was changed into a stone, which still retained the power of voice. Milton personifies her thus: Sweet Echo, sweetest nymph, that liv'st unseen Within thy airy shell, By slow Meander's margin green, Canst thou not tell me of a gentle pair That illest thy Narcissus are? —Philadelphia Press.

Unearned Gratitude.

A sample of the late Dr. William Everett's caustic repartee: "I always experience a sense of deep obligation to you whenever I meet you or hear of you," said George Rabbitt to Dr. Everett one morning when they found themselves packing the deck of an ocean steamer together. "Why so?" piped the doctor. "Because," said Mr. Rabbitt, "I recall that I was once so fortunate as to win the Boston prize for oratory at Harvard, and you were chairman of the board of judges." "I remember it perfectly well," rejoined the brusque doctor. "The judges were five in number. At the conclusion of the speaking we retired to consider the merits of the contestants. It was moved that you be awarded a first prize. On that motion the vote was 3 to 2 in your favor. I was one of the two." —Boston Transcript.

The Pessimist.

"I've had an offer for my house. A man wants to pay me $3,000 more than it cost me." "You'll accept of course?" "Yes, but I'm afraid the man's relations will not cut his check before I can close the deal." —Exchange.

The Arch.

The consensus of opinion among the learned is to the effect that the arch was invented by the Romans. Some claim that Archimedes of Sicily was the inventor, while there are others who would make it to be of Etruscan origin, but there can be no doubt about the fact that the Romans were the first to apply the principle to architecture. The earliest instance of its use is in the case of the Cloaca Maxima, or greatest sewer, of Rome, built about 588 B. C. by the first of the Tarquin line of kings, a work which is regarded by the historians as being one of the most stupendous monuments of antiquity. Built entirely without cement, it is still doing duty after a service of almost twenty five centuries. —New York American.
