Mosquitoes in Bagdad.

A round the world electrical engineer tells this story:

"We ran up to Bagdad to put over a little deal with the pasha, a former government official who had been prominent in the days of Abdul Hamid. His palace was infested with mosquitoes, and we had to plan to give him relief."

"He lived in the usual Moorish house, with high walls, flat roof with parapets, few windows and open court. The old pasha looked exactly as if he had just stepped out of a Broadway musical comedy with his shining silk robes, turban and red shoes with up-turned toes."

"In the palace garden was a stream with a fall of about ten feet. It would develop about one-fourth horsepower. We built a water mill, equipped it with a dynamo, wired the palace and started up some gigantic electric fans. These fans cooled the air and also blew through the rooms a narcotic sufficiently powerful to cause the mosquitoes to fall in a coma. All that remained was for the servants to go around and sweep them up in piles to be destroyed."—G. T. Hadley in World Outlook.

Going the Limit.

"Tell that fellow Ginglyer not to call here any more," said paterfamilias savagely.

"What's the use, papa?" Evangeline asked.

"I say tell him not to call any more," repeated paterfamilias with increased anger.

"Why, papa, he calls seven times a week now. He can't call any more than that."—London Tit-Bits.

Greenwich Hill.

Probably no hill in the world has had so strangely varied a history or played so important a part in the affairs of men as that at Greenwich. The granite line across the foothills on its summit is the meridian from which the longitude on every British map and chart is calculated.

Caviar's.
As a matter of fact, not all caviare comes from the sturgeon, since, like other foods, it is usually adulterated with the use of inferior fishes prepared in similar fashion. True caviare, however, is only the eggs of the sturgeon.
