Kansas Society Meets In Ashland July 13

The third annual meeting of the Kansans of the Rogue valley will be held at Ashland Thursday, July 13, and it is the intention to make this the biggest and the most enjoyable occassion of its nature ever held in the valley, and everyone who was born a Jayhawker or formerly lived in the sunflower state, is cordially invited and earnestly requested to prepare now to attend and take baskets well filled for an old fashioned Kansas picnic dinner—the kind that you enjoyed so well in the days that will always live in your pleasant memories. Plan to take a day off and attend the Chatauqua on July 13.

Well anyway when Mr. Hughes does speak, he says something. As between Hughes and Wilson there should be no question as to which should deserve to get the silent vote.

Washington was called by many sobriquets. He was first of all "Father of His Country." "Providence left him childless that his country might call him father." Sigourney calls him "Pater Patriae." Chief Justice Marshall, the "American Fabius." Lord Byron in his "Ode to Napoleon" calls him "the Cincinnatus of the West." For having a new world on his shoulders he was called the "Atlas of America." The English soldiery called him by the sarcastic nickname of "Lovely Georgius." Red Jacket, the Seneca Indian chief, called him the "Flower of the Forest." The Italian poet Vittorio Alfieri called him "Deliverer of America." His bitter opponents sarcastically called him the "Stepfather of His Country" during his presidency.

An Unregretted Mistake

By ALAN HINSDALE

During a winter season I was a member of a certain "bunch" consisting of half a dozen girls and as many fellows, who associated principally with each other. We made it a rule to address one another by our Christian names. We were all excellent friends, but so far as I knew there was nothing lover-like between any couple. If there was any one of the girls that I was more drawn to than the others it was Edith Cloverlie, but our intercourse was entirely friendly and nothing more.

We became scattered in the spring, some of the girls going to the country early, some of the fellows going off to different places to make their start in a career. I remained in the city where we had been so happily united. One morning on arriving at my place of business I found on my desk a telegram reading as follows:

Chatsworth, N. Y., June —, ——.
F. R. Emerson, Victoria, N. Y.:
You are expected by the 4 o'clock train. Come to 41 South Prospect street at 9 p. m. sharp. Barbara has arranged between us.
EDITH C.

If ever a fellow was puzzled that fellow was myself. I am Francis Robert Emerson. The signer seemed to be Edith Cloverlie, and Barbara Stewart was one of our social clique. But what I was wanted at Chatsworth for was more than I could imagine.

Chatsworth was but an hour's ride by rail, and I determined to answer the telegram in person. On my arrival there I dined and spent the evening in the park smoking till 9 o'clock, when I rang the doorbell at 41 South Prospect street. I was received by a maid, who took my card upstairs and, returning, said that Miss Carter would be down in a few minutes.

Miss Carter! Here was a solution in a nutshell. The telegram had not been sent by Edith Cloverlie. After all, a mistake had been made through a coincidence of names. What should I do? Doubtless when the young lady appeared and met a man she had never seen before an explanation would be reached.

Miss Carter came down dressed to go out. She displayed no surprise at all on meeting a stranger. She was to me on sight intensely attractive. She received me cordially and began in this wise:

"I presume Barbara or, rather, Mr. Underwood, has explained just what is required of you, and there is nothing for me but to do what she requires of me. I have kept her secret, and no disarrangement of her plans will occur from my having communicated them to any one. Of course, now that you are to be one of the actors in this little"—

"Pardon me. I cannot receive a secret under a mistake. Before proceeding further will you tell me who do you think I am?"

"Why, Barbara Martin's betrothed, of course."

"And who is Barbara Martin's betrothed?"

"Who is her betrothed! Why, Fred Emerson. Why do you ask these questions?"

"Because there has been a mistake. I am Frank Emerson, not Fred. This morning I received a telegram from one I supposed to be Edith Cloverlie. It was doubtless intended for one the initials of whose name are the same as mine. I did not understand why I was to come here, but I came. I beg of you not to tell me what I have no right to listen to."

"Oh, my good gracious!"

I took out the telegram and explained the coincidence of names as I have explained it here. But the young lady's mind was on something else.

"This is very unfortunate," she said, much disturbed. "Mr. Emerson and I were expected to do certain things tonight. A carriage is to call for us at half past 9. We were to go where the coachman would take us, and"—

"Can I not act in the other fellow's stead?"

"That I don't know. I have not been given the details of this affair. I am expected to do what I shall be told to do."

"Then it would not be wise to introduce me as this Fred Emerson. You are not authorized to bring a stranger into a secret belonging to others."

"But if we do not appear the whole affair may collapse."

At this moment a maid appeared and announced to Miss Carter that she was wanted on the telephone. She left me for a few minutes and on returning seemed very much relieved.

"It's been postponed," she said. "It came to light late in the afternoon that this Fred Emerson had not received my telegram."

"For which I am duly thankful."

"Why do you say that?"

"Because if he had received it I would not and should have been deprived of the pleasure of this interview."

She did not appear at all displeased at this speech, which she mistook for mere gallantry. It was much more—the case was one of love at first sight.

"But you have had all this journey for nothing."

"My time will hang heavily on my hands unless you permit me to remain in your company for the rest of the evening."

"I shall be pleased to entertain you."

The part Mr. Fred Emerson had been expected to play was best man in a secret marriage. Miss Carter was to have been the bride's attendant.

"SPEAR HEAD"

The Famous Chew with the Delicious, Fruity Flavor That Lasts

MADE BY MODERN PROCESSES

You want to get all the enjoyment and benefit possible out of tobacco. Then chew plug tobacco.

You want your chew to have the wholesome, appetizing richness of ripe fruit. Then chew Spear Head.

You want a plug with a deliciously sweet and mellow flavor that lasts as long as the chew lasts. Then chew Spear Head.

One chew of Spear Head will convince any man that there's no other tobacco on earth with such a rich and lasting flavor. That's because all the natural juices of the choicest Burley leaf are retained in Spear Head.

The making of Spear Head is conducted strictly according to pure-food methods in a great modern factory that is spic-and-span throughout.

The most expensive, modern processes keep Spear Head fresh, sweet and pure at every stage.

The luscious plug of Spear Head, from which you bite the tastiest, wholesomest of chews, represents the highest form of plug tobacco production.

Try Spear Head—the very best chew that money can buy. In the cuts, wrapped in your [illegible]

THE THRICE-A-WEEK EDITION OF THE NEW YORK WORLD

Practically a Daily at the Price of a Weekly. No Other Newspaper in the World Gives so Much at so Low a Price.

There has never been a time when a newspaper was more needed in the household. The great war in Europe has now entered its second year, with no promise of an end for a long time. These are world shaking events, in which the United States, willing or unwilling, has been compelled to take a part. No intelligent person can ignore such issues.

The Presidential contest also will soon be at hand. Already candidates for the nomination are in the field, and the campaign, owing to the extraordinary character of the times, will be of supreme interest. No other newspaper will inform you with the promptness and cheapness of the Thrice-a-Week edition of the New York World.

THE THRICE-A-WEEK WORLD'S regular subscription price is only $1 00 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and together for one year for $2.00 cash only.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.50.
