THE GENERAL ELECTION

The returns from Tuesday's election contained more surprises than usual and the knowing ones are busy explaining just "how it happened."

In this county, the entire republican ticket with the exception of Curly Wilson for sheriff, was elected, most of the candidates receiving the normal majority. Jennings, democrat, beating Wilson by only 134 votes. From the returns it is evident that many registered republicans "knifed" both Curley and Geo. Roberts, the latter winning over Borden by only 91 votes—the old prayer might well be changed to "Good Lord deliver us from our friends."

The state and district offices elected are all republicans. Mr. Hughes electors won in this state by about 9000 plurality.

Throughout the country the election was the closest since 1884, when Blaine was defeated by Cleveland by the electoral vote of New York which went democratic by only 575 votes. Several states this time will be won and lost by even less votes.

As we go to press it seems that Mr. Wilson is elected, though the returns are incomplete and the vote in several states is so close that the official count may be needed to determine the result.

THE CITY ELECTION

So much attention has been given to the general election that citizens of Jacksonville have almost forgotten that we have a special city election next Monday the result of which may have more effect upon the future of this city and the whole valley than even the election of Mr. Hughes or Mr. Wilson.

We publish in this paper a letter from Mr. Bullis which briefly explains the reason why he wishes to obtain a franchise for a longer period than at present allowed by our charter. Briefly speaking the object of the election is to change the word "twenty," so as to read "fifty," in order that the Council may grant a franchise for a period not longer than fifty years. This is the only change made, all other provisions will remain just as they are at present.

The adoption of this amendment can hurt no one and it will help Mr. Bullis to finance the extension of the road to the Blue Ledge and on to the coast. Vote 100 x Yes.

Letter From President Bullis

To the Citizens of Jacksonville:—
I am asking at your hands an extension of time for the Southern Oregon Traction Company's franchise to maintain railroad tracks along the streets of your city, where now laid, because of the fact that without such it will be impossible for me to sell bonds with which to raise money to do what I hope and expect to do in building and extending this railroad, making it of real service and importance to your municipality and the whole of Jackson county as well.

I cannot conceive that you would ever elect to throw out our tracks and force a discontinuance of railroad service, but bond houses are very particular to know before they will contract to buy bonds, as to title to rights of way and franchises through municipalities and insist that such rights if not perpetual, shall run, at least, for a much longer time than the maturity of the mortgage.

You can confidently expect that the benefit to be derived from this railroad will increase as time goes on and one thing after another grows with it. We shall improve the property along as we can by fixing up the buildings and grading up the street and the tracks and laying better tracks.

Hoping that we will get a favorable vote at the coming election and promising loyal support in doing what I am at all times for the upbuilding of your city.

I beg to remain
Sincerely yours
S. S. BULLIS
Pres.

If simplified spelling ever comes into general use, it is to be hoped that the very first change decreed will be the dropping of that first letter in opposition.

Beet Growers Will Be Sugar Plant Visitors.

Grants Pass, O., Nov. 7.—"Sugar Beet Growers' Day will be celebrated in this city next Saturday. Special trains will be run from Ashland on the south to Sutherlin on the north, free for the beet growers and their families. The visitors will be taken through the factory to observe the progress of the beet from its arrival at the plant until it goes into the sack as granulated sugar. A ton of sugar has been set aside and will be put in miniature sacks of a halfpound each, for each woman visitor.

All visitors are to be the guests of Grants Pass, and, after inspecting the factory, will be guests at luncheon. A meeting of the growers will be held later to be addressed by Governor Withycombe and Chief Agriculturist Austin, of the Utah-Idaho Sugar company, of Salt Lake City. The experience of farmers the past season in raising beets will be told by a number of growers.

Every minute of the time of the visitors will be occupied and a committee is busy arranging for attractions.

Spice of Life

They used to walk through the Scottish cemeteries on the "Sabbath," by way of maintaining the proper mental attitude. Sady MacTosh, who had never been suspected of brilliance of thought, returned home from one of these Sunday excursions and said: "Feyther, I took a bit walk about th' cemetery th' day, an' I readit the inscriptions on th' tombstones." "A what wis th' dooches, after ye said that?" asked his sorn partner. "Weel, feyther, I wunnert whaur the wicked fowk wis buried."

Episode of a Halloween Party

By BARBARA PHIPPS

Myrtle wrote me to spend a week with her at their country place in October. It is said that we women put the most important part of a letter in a postscript, and Myrtle certainly did so in this case, for in a space where she had scarcely room to write them were the words, "Jimmie Atherton will be with us."

Myrtle devoted three pages of her letter in suggesting different costumes from which I might choose one to wear at a fancy dress Halloween party she proposed to give for her guests. She advised me to bring my costume with me, for I could not get one in the country.

I arrived three days before the party and was disappointed to find that Mr. Atherton would not be with us till Halloween. I could scarcely wait for him. He had telephoned me that he expected to meet me at Myrtle's house party and had given me to understand that all would be settled between us during our visit. Of course no one else than I could make out his meaning, though I can't help but consider his saying anything over a phone to convey such a meaning evidence of the impatience of lovers.

The three days I spent waiting for the arrival of my lover, and especially what I expected to hear from him, were the longest of my life. I fear I presented a bad appearance to the other guests moping by myself and, if I joined in their sports, showing plainly that my mind—indeed, my heart—was somewhere else. At any rate, Myrtle knew where my heart was if the others did not.

During the day before the party we were all busy preparing our costumes, some of which must be constructed impromptu. The men were very remiss about this. What women love to do in a matter of dress is a bore to a man, and several of Myrtle's men guests had come either without a fancy dress or with a simple domino and mask. Myrtle insisted on every one representing some historical character.

At 5 o'clock in the afternoon Myrtle received a telegram from Jimmie—my Jimmie—that he could not get away in time for the Halloween party, but he would do the best he could. When Myrtle told me this my heart sank within me like lead. I dreaded joining in the evening's festivities with such a disappointment upon me. But what could I do? I must make the best of it and not render myself obnoxious by pining among a troop of merry-makers. I succeeded so poorly that Myrtle felt obliged to come to my rescue. About 10 o'clock, when the merrymaking was at its height, she said to me:

"Gwen, go out into the grounds with a hand mirror and see if the man you are to marry does not look over your shoulder."

I was glad of an excuse to get away by myself. I didn't care for a hand glass, but Myrtle had provided a number of them for the occasion and thrust one into my hand. Several of the girls had already gone forth on an errand similar to mine, each having taken a mirror.

I strolled out, not into the darkness, for the moon was near the full, taking my way down the driveway that led from the house to the gate. Presently I stopped and raised the glass. I did this without being conscious of the act, for I knew already the man I would marry and had no idea of seeing his face in the glass. I moved the mirror to take in different places behind me and at last saw something I was not prepared for.

One of our house party—as was evident from her costume—was sitting on a bench in a recess among shrubbery, and beside her sat a man in ordinary business apparel. As I looked he suddenly drew her toward him and gave her a bear hug. During this episode a cloud was passing over the moon, but as soon as it had rolled away there was light enough for me to see that the man in the case was my Jimmie Atherton.

I moved noiselessly away and back to the house and on reaching it went to my room, where I spent half an hour getting myself in a condition to go downstairs. When I descended I found Mr. Atherton, who had not long before come in, having arrived by a late train. He came up to me smiling, but I bowed to him ceremoniously and passed on.

I nerved myself to show great gaiety for the rest of the evening, especially before Mr. Atherton, and was glad when the festivities were over and I could hide my anguish in my room. When all was quiet Myrtle, who had observed that something was wrong with me, came in and asked what it was. When I told her a smile came to her lips, and she asked me what costume the girl Jimmie had hugged wore. I replied that I could not see it distinctly, but it was crimson. At this she burst into a laugh and said:

"That girl was Johnny Webster. He makes up admirably as a woman. He had gone out to spy on the girls who were consulting their mirrors, hoping to look over some girl's shoulder, and while doing so Jimmie Atherton came up from the station. Johnny hailed him, and the two sat down on a bench for a few moments' chat before coming to the house."

The next morning I was as good as pie to Jimmie. He tried hard to find out why I had treated him so coolly the evening before, but I kept the secret. When we left Myrtle's home we were engaged.
