ENGLISH THRUSHES TUNE UP

Songsters Are in Evidence Even Early in February, Robins Singing Throughout the Winter.

Thrushes in England are early singers, and it is not unusual to hear a thrush singing even in the first week of February, says the Christian Science Monitor. The gardens—and, of course, a thrush loves a garden—are then green, and moist, and very quiet and already in full possession of the robin, a very charming musician—a musician that sings throughout the winter and gains particular laurels in doing so.

This season the thrushes that inhabit the woods and hedges and remain during the winter have decided to break through tradition and sing as much and as early as they have a mind to. It seems that they, as well as the robins, sing in December and sing in full voice. Some one has heard a De Rozke in a thicket, who begins with the daybreak, and sings as gloriously a song as any that he is wont to sing in the early days of spring.

Have his calculations been thrown out by the mildness of the weather, for we hear of bunches of outdoor chrysanthemums coming in from country gardens, or is there a movement on foot for complete liberty of action in regard to the commencement and duration of the musical season?

A "Changed" Quarter.

Thousands of persons, banks and corporations are daily causing the secret service and subtreasury great annoyance by telephone calls inquiring if the 1917 quarter has been counterfeited, states the New York World. The National City bank and the Federal Reserve bank are among those who have been flooded with requests for enlightenment.

The trouble results from an act of congress, based on the idea that the legend on the reverse side of the piece was not as clear as it should be, ordering it changed. The new issue recently was put in circulation.

In the first issue the eagle is at the bottom of the coin and there are seven stars on the left and six stars on the right of the national bird.

In the second issue the eagle has been placed near the center of the coin, and there are five stars on each side and three stars beneath the eagle and the "E pluribus unum" and other reading matter is more distinct.

Both coins are of course O. K.

Gives Credit to Solomon.

"Solomon was the first human being, so far as we can find out, to know the language of animals," said Prof. S. E. Wolfenson, chairman of the department of Semitic languages and Hellenistic Greek, University of Wisconsin, lecturing on "Archaeological Exploration in Palestine and the Orient."

"The finding of a blast furnace near the city of Lachish, in Palestine," Professor Wolfenson continued, "shows that the metal industry is not so modern as most of us suppose."

"As to monopoly of trade, the first instance which we discover is when Solomon took occasion to use the temple of Gezar, in Palestine, for this purpose."

Not Improbable.

"Are you friendly with the policeman on your block?"

"Oh, we speak cordially enough," said the citizen of a "dry" town, "but I was carrying home a box of 'shoes' the other day and dropped it on the pavement. The package began to leak and ever since then I've had an idea that he regards me with suspicion."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

His Tribe Is Increasing.

Our daughter Belle, now Mrs. A. M. Frost, increased the population of Tacoma by one small baby girl on July 27. This makes our sixth grandchild. We always had trouble to count our children, and if the second generation keeps coming so fast we may have to put them in a cornel and run them through the chute to find the number. —Condon (Ore.)
