U. S. TO GUARD BOND HOLDERS FROM CROOKS

Asks for Names of Persons Trading Worthless Stock for Liberty Bonds

The United States government has begun a determined fight against Liberty Bond swindlers to protect the people who patriotically responded to the call for funds to support the war.

All persons who are sent literature or are approached by dealers persuading them to part with their bond holdings for what are considered speculative or doubtful securities have been asked by the government to send the names and addresses of the companies to the Federal Trade Commission, Washington, D. C.

The Federal Trade Commission will call for reports in proper cases and the Federal Trade Act provides that any company or person making a false report to the commission will be heavily fined and imprisoned. The commission points out that the smallest holder can obtain the same price as the shark and that all the expenses of running the fraudulent business of the illicit dealers must be borne by the holder of the bonds.

The government by a successful campaign at this time hopes to convince prospective buyers of the Victory Loan that it is ready to make every effort to stand behind holders of government bonds.

EIGHT CENTS BUYS 5000 HUN HELMETS FOR VICTORY DRIVE

Two Pennies Change to Apply on Purchase of Submarine for Final Loan

One dime with two cents back for change brought 5000 German helmets to the Liberty Loan Committee of the Twelfth Federal Reserve District to be used in the Victory drive.

When C. A. Farnsworth, manager of publicity for this district, heard that Frank R. Wilson, national director of publicity, had bid in $5,000 helmets from the War Department he enclosed ten cents in a letter with a request that he be sent his share of the trophies.

A wire came back the next day saying that 5000 helmets would be shipped with two pennies for change. Mr. Farnsworth wired to keep the change and apply it on a submarine which the twelfth district would like to have to help advertise the campaign.

The helmets will be distributed as prizes during the fifth loan campaign. Suggestions as to how they should be awarded should be sent to C. A. Farnsworth, 429 Sacramento street, San Francisco.

SIGNAL CORPS FILM TO HELP VICTORY DRIVE

"The Price of Peace" Will Be Shown As Free Attraction in Twelfth District.

The name of the wonderful new motion picture prepared by the U. S. Signal Corps has been changed from "New Glory for Old" to "The Price of Peace." It will be shown throughout the Twelfth Federal Reserve District as a free attraction although big producers have offered a fortune for permission to exhibit it on the regular circuits.

Here is what Frank R. Wilson, national director of Liberty Loan publicity, said of the film after seeing it: "I have just seen the working print of 'The Price of Peace' and its Victory Loan titles. It is the greatest film I ever looked at. Not by any means its virtue in its Victory Loan selling message for that is subordinated to the film itself, but for sheer dramatic forcefulness, emphasized by a brutal nakedness of authenticity, I have never seen a film the equal of 'The Price of Peace.'"

WHAT A NIGHT!

By LINCOLN ROTHBLUM.

It was the coldest night Boston had had in many years. Two days' snow fall, accompanied by a freak blizzard sweeping down from Newfoundland, had buried the entire city in a heavy blanket of white. It was but nine o'clock this Saturday night, and the elements, unrestrained, played at will in the empty streets.

Doris, wrapped up in a bathrobe of carmen-colored corduroy, pushed the hassock closer to the fire and snuggled in the comfortable warmth of the burning logs.

"Just a year ago tonight," she murmured dreamily, "but it was not so cold."

"Come, sis," remonstrated a comely lad of sixteen, who squatted Indian fashion, close by her, "you mustn't always figure how long it is since that day. I'm big enough to know what men do, and I'll bet my new rifle Stanley Chalmers ain't no coward. What'll you bet?"

The boy extended his cramped legs, and creaking them up before him, clasped his hands about his knees. He knew he would again hear the entire account of why his sister broke her engagement with Stanley Chalmers, and he wanted to be comfortable during the recital.

"It was not so cold as it is tonight," Doris began, as if reciting a well-learned lesson, "when we turned the corner of Dorchester and Saxton streets. He had just been telling me he would protect me from all ill, when a horrible-looking fellow bumped into me and swore out a terrible oath. I surely expected Stanley would knock him down, but all he did was grab my arm and hustle me off."

"When we got home," she continued, pulling the bathrobe closer about her, "you were in the hall and heard me tell him I could never marry a coward."

"Aw, I guess I'll get some more wood," Bob answered practically, and in an effort to change the subject, "the fire's dying down."

In a few moments Bob returned from the kitchen, his arms laden with roughly chopped pine boughs. As he crossed the threshold between the two rooms and stopped to adjust his burden, from the upper regions of the house a terrific crash reverberated. The wood dropped from his arms and he dashed across the room swiftly to his sister.

"What is it?" his lips formed the words his voice refused to utter.

"We must see who it is," she whispered, thoroughly frightened, and grasped the rod used to stir up the embers.

They must get help. With a dash through the short hall, they threw open the porch door. Doris' shrill call was lost in the shrieks of the wind.

What went there? Was that a man, bucking the gale? Was that figure enveloped in a great coat a real man—sent by Providence to help them in their predicament? Would he pass their house? Did he not hear them?

"Help! Help!" they called out in unison, "we're being robbed! There's a murderer upstairs! Help!"

The man did hear. He was turning. He was coming towards them. As he vaulted the low stoop, Bob pointed, "Upstairs!"

He cleared the first three steps with a single bound, ignoring the poker Doris mutely held out. "Better that than nothing," she subconsciously thought, and followed up in his wake.

Into one bedroom and then the other, he cast the glare of his pocket flashlight. Under the beds and in the closets, no corner escaped his rigid inspection. And then into the bathroom.

The door stubbornly refused to open. Someone was holding it. They entered the bathroom and the door banged tight as the flashlight went out.

Alone in a dark bathroom with a strange man and a burglar!

What a night!

Doris screamed.

The man located the electric switch and light filled the room. A slight stir against the opposite wall brought them about face on the defensive. And they saw—an extension lamp to the dining room table slip from its moorings and join its mate at the bottom of the bathtub in a crashing embrace.

The man laughed. Doris sank to the floor. He grabbed her down the stairway, where Bob sat in frightened patience. In a few moments she was composed.

"That we found no burglar does not lessen my gratitude, Mr.—"

The man lowered the high collar closely concealing his head.

"Stanley!" Doris gasped.

"Didn't I tell you he was brave?" yelled Bob, pulling the hero toward the fire.

And as they gathered about its comforting warmth, Doris looked up into eyes of soft brown and gently asked: "But, Stan, won't you explain about a year ago?"

The man squared his shoulders. "I knew that the fellow wouldn't hurt you, for he was only drunk. But I didn't want to embarrass you by the crowd that would have gathered had I struck him."

"Why didn't you tell me all this before?"

"You never gave me the chance to explain. You just judged me."

Doris hung her head in contrition.

"Forgive me, Stan," she whispered, and as she sought the comfort of his protective arms, naively added: "Can't you see I'm catching cold without my ring?"
