Fifty policemen, wearing revolvers on their belts and reinforced by a special shotgun squad of 16, a company of state militia, 30 deputy sheriffs, a group of secret service men from Chicago and hundreds of citizen volunteers, prevented the parade after the Russian Socialists flouted an order of Mayor W. H. Hodges prohibiting the march and declared they would p.oceed despite the authorities.

The situation became more and more tense and fights between Socialists and the authorities became frequent. When the situation had reached its height a heavy downpour of rain scattered the crowd and apparentiv saved the city from a reign of blood-
