To the Editor: At a recent meeting of the Directors of the United States Grain Corporation, at New York City, it was determined to define a little more clearly, what constitutes a retail transaction in the purchase of wheat.

Under the license requirements, retailers are not required to have a license, but it is now determined that the purchase of wheat direct from the farmer for the purchase of resale, or manufacture, no matter how small the quantity, is not a retail transaction, and that persons engaged in such operations must have a license. Also, the handling of seed wheat, no matter how small the quantity cannot be considered a retail transaction, and such dealers must hold a license. Dealers in damaged wheat, unfit for human consumption, who may purchase such damaged wheat direct from the farmer must have a license.

Retail dealers who purchase wheat entirely from licensed operators, are not required to have a license.

License application blanks may be obtained upon request at this office.

Very truly yours,
United States Grain Corporation.

Second Vice President.

LIVE IN PRIMITIVE STATE

Tribes in Interior of Venezuela Have Had Little Contact With Civilization.

Almost every tribe and race has found the secret of fire, even though civilization has not come near them. Needless to say, matches are unknown except as they have been carried into distant lands by white men, and fire is made by rubbing sticks together, with a sort of flint and tinder or, as in the case of the Macacos, with a drill.

These "people of the mist," as the explorers into the interior of Venezuela call them, keep their fires burning steadily from one year's end to another, but if a new one is needed it is started by drilling into wood until it bursts into flame.

The Macacos share the Indians' love of painting their faces and, like them, use bow and arrow for hunting, but go about swathed in heavy clothing, much like that of the Arabs, because of the cold of the region in which they live.

The homes of the Macacos are all built on hilltops, and the average altitude of the settlement is 3,600 feet. They cultivate sweet potatoes, bananas and maize, out of a combination of which they make a very strong fermented drink for use at feasts, and they are also exceedingly clever at basketry and other weaving, but are among the most uncivilized of all tribes and never, so it is said, take a bath unless unexpectedly caught out in a rain.

GOOD HEALTH RULES FOR ALL

English People Have Many Ideas Which It Would Be Well for Americans to Copy.

One of the most popular forms of food in England is cheese. This supplies a highly concentrated protein food which, when properly ripened and masticated, is usually well assimilated. Not only does this food contain a large percentage of protein, but it also contains fat and mineral salts. When combined with bread, which is a carbohydrate food, cheese makes an ideal combination, supplying as it does all the elements necessary for nourishment—protein, fat, carbohydrate and mineral salts.

Cheese and bread is a very popular form of food in England and it is eaten by all classes. Being an economical food, it is eaten to a larger extent by the laboring classes, who, owing to the sort of work they do, require a good tissue builder at a moderate price.

It is well to remember that part of the health of the English race is due to the fact that the English life is an outdoor life, and it is a very good thing for us to profit by this and cultivate at all times, in ourselves and in our children, the habit of getting outdoors as much as possible.

Biliousness

WHEN you have a bilious attack your liver fails to perform its functions. You become constipated. The food you eat ferments in your stomach instead of digesting. This inflames the stomach and causes nausea, vomiting and a terrible headache. Take Chamberlain's Tablets. They will tone up your liver, clean out your stomach and you will soon be as well as ever. There is nothing better.
