A town that never has anything to do in a public way is on the way to the cemetery. Any citizen who will do nothing for his own town is helping to dig the grave. A man that curses the town furnishes the coffin. The man who is so selfish as to have no time from his business to give to city affairs is making the shroud. The man who will not advertise is driving the hearse. The man who is always pulling back from any public enterprise throws bouquets on the grave. The man who is so stingy as to be howling hard times, preaches the funeral, sings the doxology, and thus the town lies buried from all sorrow and care.

An exchange says that alcohol will remove grass stains from summer clothes. The exchange is right. It will also remove summer clothes and a fall and winter clothes not only from the man who drinks it, but also from his wife and family. It will remove household furniture from the house and eatables from the pantry; the smiles from the face of his wife and the happiness from his home. As a remover of things alcohol has few equals.

Fishes in Shipyard.
To catch a nice mess of fish right in the middle of a shipyard, without the trouble of walking to the river bank, is a novel as well as a pleasant incident of any shipbuilder's noon hour. Denn Adams, a tool-room foreman in the G. M. Standifer plant at Portland, Ore., enjoyed such a run of luck a year ago, and never told about it till just now.
"A year ago I stood about where the office is today," said Adams recently, "and got a basketful of smelt. Dredges were at work clearing out a fill and the pipes were run past here, carrying water and sand to fill up the swamp. The smelt run was on and it wasn't a difficult matter to get all of 'em you wanted as they came up through the pipes. Some fishing!"—Fore and Aft.

He Didn't Have to Learn.
Ernest Hutcherson, the noted pianist, tells a story related to him by the head of a European conservatory which will entertain many teachers. A new pupil arrived at the conservatory for examination. The teacher struck a note on the piano and asked: "What note is that?"
"Major," answered the smiling pupil.
"What note is that?" asked the teacher, striking another.
"Minor," came the prompt answer.
"What note is this?" then asked the amazed teacher.
"Diminished," blandly retorted the pupil.
"Where did you learn all that?" inquired the teacher scratching his head.
"I didn't learn it," responded the delighted pupil. "I always knew it."—Music and Musicians.

Try This on Your Parrot.
As the automobile party passed one corner they saw a soldier on guard, a big white dog beside him, and then a beautiful American flag. Of course this combination attracted the attention of everyone in the car. The flag was silk, the dog majestic and the soldier proud of his trust.
"Oh, look at that dog on guard!" exclaimed the woman.
The little boy snickered audibly. All were impressed with the solemnity of the scene, and this outbreak seemed to the father uncalled for.
"What do you mean, laughing, Johnny?" he demanded.
"Oh," cried little Johnny, "mamma said, 'Look at the dog gone guard!'"—Indianapolis News.

CENSORS.
Mr. Cook Mrs. James

EDITORIAL.

There will be a lively time in Apple Valley this Thanksgiving and at least one thing to be thankful for, our school building is done! We move in Monday! Is it any wonder we are happy.

There are those who heave sighs when they think of losing the freedom of close quarters. But we all unite in giving three cheers to our school board, our teacher and the taxpayers.

GENERAL NEWS ITEMS.

The school house is finished except putting up the seats. We expect to move in Monday.

The girls have built a basket ball court and are going to begin practicing soon.

Everyone is anticipating a good time at the entertainment Wednesday night. Chocolate and coffee will be furnished by the school and every one is asked to bring either cake or sandwiches.

The play that is to be given by the Grade room Wednesday night promises to be good.

SOCIETY.

The President of the A. V. H. S. invited the girls to the hall to watch a game of basket ball Monday evening.

Applegate High will give a Thanksgiving program on Wednesday evening.

Miss Gertrude Bottjer visited school Tuesday for the last time. She is leaving Monday to attend the Providence at Vancouver, Wash.

Mr. Edward Kubli from Eugene, Ore., has been visiting the A. V. H. S. for the past few days.

SPORTS.

We received our new basket ball the other day.

Arrangements were made the other day for a hall to play basket ball in. We are now hard at practice.

The boys made a basket ball court last week and have had a few interesting games.

A boys second team is being organized. We expect to have a weight team. No one is eligible over 130 pounds.

The girls of the H. S. are making a basket ball court. The smaller boys are planning to use it to play a sort of a foot ball on. Maybe it will not work tho.

CHAFF.

Cecil: "Papa, give me a nickel."
Mr. Boucher: "Why, son, you're too old to be begging for nickels."

Cecil thoughtfully: "I guess you're right dad, make it a dime."

Mrs. James: "I notice some of the pupils spell 'ridiculously.'"
Mr. Cook: "They do? Well I don't believe there are many who can."

Mrs. James: "Leon, what three words do you use the most."
Leon: "I don't know."
Mrs. James: "Correct."

Teacher: "Freemont, why are the muscles of my arm larger than those in my head?"
Freemont: "Because you don't use the muscles of the head as much."

This notice appeared on the bulletin board Wednesday morning.

REWARD.

Liberal Latin grade for evidence leading to the recovery of the report cards.

Faculty.

But Fate decreed that a non-Latin student should claim the reward,
Deep groans from the Latin class.

In the Pierce Subdivision, in Township 37 South, Range 1, West of the Willamette Meridian, in said Jackson County, to secure the payment of $500.00 and interest; and requiring and directing the sale of the mortgaged property, as on execution, for the satisfaction of said judgment, and costs and attorney's fees, or so much thereof as the proceeds of sale will satisfy.

By the order of the Honorable F. M. Calkins, Judge of the above entitled court, made and entered October 11, 1919, this summons is ordered published for a period of six successive weeks in the Jacksonville Post, published at Jacksonville in said Jackson County, State of Oregon, and the first publication hereof will be on the 29th day of November, 1919.

EDITORIAL.

Thrift as used in reference to the school work has many meanings. Thrift has reference to saving, earning and home work. For most school pupils home work is probably the most important of the three. Now that we are starting out in life we should not get the habit of spending money uselessly but save and put the money now saved to some good use in our life. At present one of the best investments is the buying of war saving stamps and thrift stamps. A thrift drive is now on and we should do all that is possible to raise the regular sum. Many of our pupils are faithful buyers of War Saving Stamps and Thrift Stamps. But the question is, why can't we all get the habit? (Assistant Editor)

"AS OVERHEARD BY THE HIGH SCHOOL."

Two basket ball teams have been organized in the 7th and 8th grades and have been practicing every day since the new basket ball arrived.

Ferroll Rock has been absent for the past week on account of sickness.

Evelyn Childers expect to leave school this week as they are moving away. We will miss her very much.

Erma and Sanford Whittier of Portland are new pupils in the 3rd and 4th grades.

He'len Ulrich and Virginia Nunn of Jacksonville in 1939, you can imagine my surprise on seeing a large brick station with cement side-walks and beautiful parking. The streets were thronged with people. The railroad had been extended from Medford to Jacksonville, where formerly had run a small trolley line. I was also surprised to learn that now Medford was but a suburb of Jacksonville.

I passed up the street marvelling at the change displayed everywhere. A large concrete building loomed up before me, and I asked a man standing near, what that building was. He informed me that it was the new confectionary store owned by Victoria Gwin. I was surprised to here my old school mate owned such a large concern. I hurried across to see her, for the man had told me that she personally supervised her numerous clerks and helpers.

"Where have all my other friends gone?" I asked Victoria after the surprise of our unexpected meeting had passed off somewhat, and we had talked a while. "I haven't heard from any of them for these twenty years."

AFTER TWENTY YEARS.

FLORA MANKE.

When I left the little village of Jacksonville, it was a small and very quiet place. It had had its boom in its prosperous mining days, years before I can remember, but the boom had left it in a state of hopeless decline. Some of the buildings built during the boom were still standing, unused, and there were none of much consequence except the court house, for Jacksonville was the county seat. Although there were a few pretty residences and a good school house, none of these buildings were very remarkable. In the business part of town there were a couple of small stores, a confectionary and a bank. These were the main buildings.

When I stepped off the train at Jacksonville in 1939, you can imagine my surprise on seeing a large brick station with cement side-walks and beautiful parking. The streets were thronged with people. The railroad had been extended from Medford to Jacksonville, where formerly had run a small trolley line. I was also surprised to learn that now Medford was but a suburb of Jacksonville.

I passed up the street marvelling at the change displayed everywhere. A large concrete building loomed up before me, and I asked a man standing near, what that building was. He informed me that it was the new confectionary store owned by Victoria Gwin. I was surprised to here my old school mate owned such a large concern. I hurried across to see her, for the man had told me that she personally supervised her numerous clerks and helpers.

"Where have all my other friends gone?" I asked Victoria after the surprise of our unexpected meeting had passed off somewhat, and we had talked a while. "I haven't heard from any of them for these twenty years."
"Oh some of them have gone away, but most of them are living in Jacksonville still. We will go around to see some of them this afternoon" she answered.

So in the afternoon we started down the street. I was certainly surprised to see so many changes. There were large buildings, some owned by people I did not know, others by my old friends. Nearly all the old buildings that I used to know so well were gone now. There was a new Presbyterian church, larger than I ever thought it would be necessary to build in Jacksonville. I learned later that the large congregation that attended there was swayed by the learned and eloquent pastor, the Reverend Paul Luv, one of my former school mates.

We went on and soon met Miss Bessie Johnston who was the owner of one of the largest millinery stores on the coast, located in Jacksonville. She told me Thelma Childers was living with her husband in their beautiful home on Jacksonville Hill, where the aristocracy was gathered now. I went up there and saw that she had a very beautiful home overlooking the valley. I judged from her appearance that she was very happy. Her sister Lois was living with her; for Lois had now become a famous authoress, although I had never read any of her books.

We then hurried down to the city as I was going on to Medford. I asked Victoria when I should have to go to meet the train. She asked why I could not go on the Air Railway later.

"The Air Railway?" I exclaimed.

"Yes" she said, "You remember little Johnny Niedermeyer? Well, he has invented an air railway on which he can carry people for many miles around. I believe he is getting quite prosperous from it."

I hurried to the place to which she directed me, and was soon talking to Johnny whom I found to be a tall handsome man, but quite different from his brother Henry, who also was a tall handsome man. Henry was in partnership with Johnny and also sold tickets at the station. The railway consisted of several aeroplanes fastened together by means of strong iron chains. Lewis Thompson was driving the head one and often performed daring feats in the air.

Of James Gwin I heard nothing more than that Victoria had said that he had gone to China some years before as a missionary and had not been heard from since. John Heuners became a noted sailor and explorer and navigated between the North and South Pole regularly. He made trips monthly carrying food to the inhabitants there.

So ended my first visit to the new Jacksonville, and as I had to return to my home I did not get to see any more of my former friends, but I vowed that some day I would return to make my home permanently in Jacksonville.
