FOR PRESIDENT FOR VICE-PRESIDENT HARDING COOLIDGE

The nomination of Senator Harding of Ohio for president at the Chicago convention last Saturday came as a distinct surprise. While events transpiring during the last few hours of the convention made the nomination of a dark horse inevitable, it was thought by many that either Hughes or Knox would be the party choice. However the public mind is rapidly becoming adjusted to the new situation and the republican presidential ticket is apparently being greeted with approval by all with the possible exception of Hiram Johnson's adherents. Regardless of rumors of the possible formation of a third party with Johnson and Borah as its leaders, it is the general opinion that peace will be declared between the factions and the republican party will make "a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull all together" to land its candidate in the White House.

Information elicited as the result of an inquiry set on foot by County School Superintendent Ager a few weeks ago, indicates that a very large percent of the schools of the county have not as yet secured teachers for the ensuing term. Most of the schools want experienced teachers and salaries offered range from $100 a month up, some rural districts having contracted for as high as $1200 a year.—a substantial increase compared with salaries previously paid but still low enough.

Supt. Ager reports that it will be difficult to secure experienced or trained teachers for $100 a month this year. However a few training class graduates have not contracted and some others lacking in training or successful experience are willing to contract at that price. It is poor economy to employ a poor teacher at any price. An investigation should be made by writing direct to references or by personal consultation with those who know the teacher and of her work as a teacher. Hand-me-down recommendations are usually valueless. It is considered unethical by the teaching profession generally to give or accept open recommendations.

FIRST PARLIAMENT IN 1265

From That Time Dates the Entry of the Commons into Power in the State.

The 20th of January, 1265, was a great day not only for the English-speaking people but the world; it was the time appointed for the meeting of the first parliament in England.

Mathew of Paris in his chronicles first uses the word in reference to a council of the barons in 1248, but it was in the year 1265, during a civil war which very much resembled that of the seventeenth century, being for law against an arbitrary power as expressed by royalty, that the first parliament, properly so-called, were assembled. It was at this time that Simon de Montfort held King Henry in his power.

This parliament was summoned in such a manner that there should be two knights for each county, and two citizens for every borough; the first clear acknowledgment of the commons element in the state. The meeting was held in that magnificent hall at Westminster and the representatives of the commons sat in the same place with their noble associates, probably at the bottom of the hall, little disposed to assert a controlling voice nor joining in any vote. But there they were and, notwithstanding the fact that De Montfort was shortly overpowered and he and nearly all of his associates slaughtered, the commons were never again left out. It was an admitted power entitled to be consulted in all great national movements and to have a directing voice in the matter of taxation.

What Hath He Done?

A man passes for what he is worth. Very idle is all curiosity concerning other people's estimate of us, and idle is all fear of remaining unknown. . . . "What hath he done?" is the divine question which searches men and transpires every false reputation. A fop may sit in any chair in the world nor be distinguished for his hour from Homer and Washington; but there can never be any doubt concerning the respective ability of human beings when we seek the truth. Pretension may sit still, but cannot act. Pretension never wrote an Iliad, nor drove back Xerxes, nor christened the world, nor abolished slavery. . . . Never a sincere word was utterly lost. Never a magnanimity fell to the ground. Always the hearts of men greet and accept it unexpectedly. A man passes for what he is worth.—Emerson.

To Keep American Ships on the Seas

For the first time since the Civil War we have a real merchant marine. It cost us $3,000,000,000 to get it.

The farmer, manufacturer, laborer—every American is interested in holding our position on the seas.

As a first step in this direction it is necessary to modify those articles of existing commercial treaties which have operated to thwart the upbuilding of our merchant marine.

By giving the notice of termination for which the several treaties provide.

This action is directed in the constructive Shipping Bill now before Congress;

Which declares it to be the policy of the United States "to do whatever may be necessary to develop and encourage" a merchant marine.

This policy deserves the support of every American.

Lacking this support the present effort to maintain our merchant marine may suffer the fate of many ineffective attempts of the past.

Send for a copy of "For an American Merchant Marine."
