The Mail-Tribune shows wonderful judgment in choosing the psychological moment in which to advocate a removal of the county court house to Medford, giving as a reason for the move the recent collapse of the Bank of Jacksonville. Without wishing to appear too inquisitive, we "ask to know" just what connection there is between the failure of a private enterprise and the location of the court house? Also, would the "present intolerable situation" be less intolerable if the court house were moved to Phoenix or Central Point instead of to Medford? The Mail-Tribune appears to be laboring under the impression that Jackson county is situated in Medford, Oregon; that the court house has somehow strayed from its natural bounds and must be reclaimed at once. If the proposition is ever placed on the ballot, the resulting vote would probably astonish our contemporary.

One of our exchanges ventures the opinion that hereafter county funds should be deposited in banks in more populous centers, "where more people could watch the bank." The writer, however, fails to specify on which side of the depository's doors the watching should be done. If watching is the one sure way to prevent a recurrence of our recent disaster, it is a safe bet that any future institution of the kind established in Jacksonville will be well watched.

A little judicious "boosting" of our natural resources means more industries, more population, more money for Jacksonville. Let everyone help.

A Basis for Choice

WHILE Government Supervision and the Federal Reserve System's protection extend to all National Banks, one may find in --Location, Quarters, Equipment, Facilities, Services and Management--sufficient reasons for selecting the First National as BANKING HEADQUARTERS.

Whether you are right in Medford, or miles away on ranch or farm, it will be possible for you to utilize this bank to good advantage.

County Highway Notes.

This week the county court had a force of men at work re-decking the bridge at Rogue river. Heavy planking, which makes an excellent driveway, is being used for this purpose.

Preparations are under way to install a rock crusher on Rogue river, two miles west of the Reese creek school house. The output of the crusher will be used to macadamize about 3 miles of road between Reese creek school house and Butte Falls. This section of road is located in the "sticky" belt and during the wet season is almost impassable.

Rogue River Full of Salmon

Marshfield, Ore., Aug. 19.—Enormous runs of salmon are coming into Rogue river greater than ever in the history of the river. The canneries find it necessary to limit the amount of fish taken from each boat in order to handle the catch.

The Macleay cannery placed a limit of 600 pounds a night on each boat. This amount is caught in a short time. Twelve cents a pound is paid so each man in a boat gets $36 for working a short time. The fish are so thick in the river it is only necessary to throw out the nets and haul them in. Fishermen are hoping that the phenomenal run will keep up so they can reap a harvest.

Notice.

Bids may be made on amounts of 25 cords or more by any one party. The Court reserves the right to reject any or all bids and to accept the one for the best interest of the County. No bid will be considered unless there is a bond or certified check in the sum of at least 5% of the amount bid.
