

ESKIMO DANCE WORTH SEEING

Ceremony Indulged in by Both Women and Men Is Performed With Rhythmic Grace.

Eskimos of Alaska perform their dancing feats to the sound of "tom-toms" with round, flat heads and short handles. The heads of the instruments are of seal hide, which the natives moisten from time to time with a sponge to keep tightened. They beat on the under side of the drum-head with long, slender willow wands. Little chips breaking off the sticks all the time and flying about. With a slow, monotonous chant at first, they gradually work themselves into a frenzied shout and loud, resonant beating of the drums as the dance goes on. While they dance the men are stripped to the waist, but the women wear their calico "Mother Hubbards," or denim parkas, with a gleaming halo of wolverine about the face. The dancing ceremony begins with a "muscle dance" by a young boy, in which the men later join, after which comes the "wolf dance," with more energy and loud shouting. The women then join in, one by one, with marvelous rhythmic grace of movement.

When the dance is over one of the musicians takes up a collection in his "tom-tom." The non-native white guests usually contribute tea and candy, it being wrong for a guest to give money.

Reckless Reggie.

Nephew—That was a pretty good dinner we had; shall we have a drink now?
Uncle—Man, ye ken A'm teetotal.
Nephew—A cigar, then.
Uncle—A dinn smoke.
Nephew—Oh, do something reckless—remember my firm is paying all the expenses!
Uncle—Weel, A think A'll hae my boots cleaned here then!—The By-stander.

British Convict System.

The largest British convict prison is Dartmoor, writes T. C. Bridges in the New Illustrated, and here the number of prisoners may rise at times to as many as 1,200. At Dartmoor the buildings have all been constructed by convict labor, the gas is made by them, the cooking done by them, while convicts grow the vegetables, care for the live stock and cultivate the farm. They make, mend and wash all the clothes, both for themselves and for their warders; they make and mend their boots, while all the utensils used in the cells—the tin cups, dishes and jugs—are made on the spot.

The Finger Nail's History.

The rapidity of the growth of the nails is indicative of the health. The growth of the nails on the right hand is in most people more rapid than of those on the left hand. Another curious point is that the rate of growth of the nail depends directly on the length of the finger; thus the nails on the two middle fingers of men grow more rapidly than those on the first and third fingers respectively, and these in turn are more speedy in the growth than those on the little finger.

THE ANSWER

By FLORENCE BURRILL.

(Copyright, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Neil Mackenzie was the biggest, broadest and in Winsbury, with the crispest dark hair and the clearest blue eyes. He had that combination of strength and boyishness which women love, and could easily have been very much of a ladies' man had he not been as bashful as he was handsome. Girls adored his lithe virility, and he received an early invitation to all of the Winsbury merry-makings. But the presence of the other sex invariably turned Neil from a living, laughing Hermes to a frozen statue. And to make things worse, he was very much in love with Cecily.

Cecily was a wee bit of a lassie, honey-colored as to hair, violet-hued as to eyes, apple-blossomy as to cheeks. A pretty air of dignity tried to contradict her little-girl figure, and she was, according to an enthusiastic friend, "just sweet!" And if she had the appearance of a tinted marble Venus she must have had some of the attributes also, for none of the many suitors Winsbury and other towns offered had made the slightest impression on the cool little heart under her dainty laces. She accepted their devotion graciously, was the merriest and most fun-loving of the younger set, but always with a fastidious reserve that let none farther than the rest.

That is, until Neil began shyly to show his heart. With him she never coqueted, his invitations she never refused, toward him she showed a sweet and simple liking; and soon the big, dark lad and the small, flowerlike girl were seen together very often indeed setting out for a country walk or drifting through the rhythm of a waltz.

But this very friendship puzzled Neil. It was so different from her treatment of other lovers; and it never occurred to him that her feeling for him might be different also. To his mind her laugh was the most joyous thing on earth, and herself the dearest. But he feared to tell her lest it end their friendship; so they were pals through the sparkling January days and the wistful April ones, with no hint of anything deeper.

When June came he could stand it no longer. He decided to take the big chance, tell her, then if she couldn't marry him, go where his profession of engineer promised success. How should he ask Cecily? He never could bare his heart with those purple eyes on him; a letter was so impersonal and cold; there should be no third party's blundering, and those were the only orthodox methods of proposing, unless—

Neil rushed to the nearest music store, purchased a blank record and had it on the victrola at home before the glow of the wonderful inspiration had time to dull. Into the little disk he spoke his love—straightforward, yearning, tender, as he could never have expressed it to her in person. Visioning a star-eyed girl in the shadows, he told how he cared for her with the simple, honest love of a clean heart, how eager he would work to make her happy; but if she didn't, couldn't love him, she was not to feel the least bit grieved nor blame herself at all, for how could a girl like her love a great, clumsy thing like him? "Only please let me know, as soon as you can, dear; and if it is 'no' there is a position waiting out West, where work will keep me a man. When your answer comes I shall either telegraph that I cannot accept—or start at once. Oh, Cecily, Cecily, shall I stay?"

The tiny parcel which meant so much in life and hope of Neil Mackenzie was dispatched by special messenger, and an anxious boy faced the hours that must pass before an answer came. He could see Cecily receive the record and run merrily to try it through at once, as she always did a new one; he could see her look of amazement—but there his vision failed. Did her face grow tender or sad or frightened?

Scarcely two hours had gone before a ring at the doorbell revealed another messenger boy with a special. Mackenzie tore it open and found—just his record.

He slipped the record late place and started the machine. How strange to hear his own tones! He smiled, half-sadly and half-whimsically, at the passion of the words. The plea came to an end: "Oh, Cecily, Cecily, shall I stay?" The needle whirled noisily several times. Then clear and vibrant in the voice of his sweetheart came the answer she had spoken into it: "Yes."

Use for Persimmon Juice.

Persimmon juice improves the paint used on the bottom of a ship, or the roof of a house. In Japan it solved the problem presented by the failure of western house paints to last satisfactorily in the Japan climate. It was only quite lately, however, that western countries had shown any interest in this Japanese product. Now that a beginning has been made in using it to mix enamel and white lead, a foreign demand has begun which is expected to increase to large proportions.

Linked Canals Long Ago.

The Panama canal is one of the modern wonders of the world, but the Royal Mail company organized transit by mules and camels across the isthmus as far back as 1848 and partially financed the Panama Railway company in 1850.
