Port of Portland Measure

In submitting the Port of Portland consolidation bill to the voters of Oregon, the people of Portland ask the people of the whole state for authority to provide means of shipment by sea for the state's products. Portland is the great port of Oregon, for it is the chief point of export for the products of both eastern and western Oregon, and in that manner it renders a public service to practically the entire state. The Port of Portland commission having been created by a special act of the legislature, that law can be amended only by the legislature or by vote of the people of all Oregon.

Upon the Port of Portland has devolved the duty of providing a navigable channel up the Columbia and Willamette rivers, of building docks and other shipping facilities. The increased number and tonnage of ships require that the channel be deepened and widened and that more docks be built. For this purpose the bill enlarges the borrowing and taxing power of the commission, but taxes are to be levied and interest on them paid by taxpayers of the Port District.

CHAUNCEY FLOREY

AN OPEN LETTER

TO THE VOTERS:—Having seen considerable comment in various newspapers concerning the legal status of the money which the County Treasurer of Jackson County had on deposit in the Bank of Jacksonville, and my position relative thereto, I desire to explain the same in so far as I am concerned.

As a taxpayer and citizen I sincerely trust that if there are not sufficient assets uncovered and recovered to pay all depositors in full that the County Court will decide to share pro-rata with the others. But since I am required by law to offer advice to the County Court when asked, if I should be called on for an opinion relative to this deposit the ethics of my profession and my official responsibilities would compel me to state that in my humble opinion the weight of authority is to the effect that they would be entitled to such a preference but that such a course would entail extensive litigation, the result of which is never certain, and that it would be fairer, and more equitable and just for the county to refuse to take advantage of this preference.

Respectfully,
G. M. ROBERTS

SQUALID PORTO RICAN TOWN

Beside Superb Scenery, Ponce Would Seem to Have Little to Attract the Tourist.

Ponce, a city on the south coast of Porto Rico, gives the false impression of being a larger city than the capital, loosely strewn as it is over a dusty, flat plain and overflowing in hovels of decreasing size into the low foothills behind. It is the most extensive town in Porto Rico, and, like many of those around the coast, lies back a few miles from the sea, for fear of pirates in the olden days, with a street-car service to its shipping suburb of Ponce-Plaza.

Airplants festoon its telephone wires, and its mosquitoes are so aggressive that to dine in its principal hotel is to wage a constant battle, while to disrobe and enter a bathroom is a perilous undertaking, according to Harry A. Franck in the Century.

Puerto de Tierra, once nothing more than the "land gate" its name implies, is almost a city of itself, a pathetic town of many shacks built of tin and dry goods boxes, spreading down and across the railroad to the swampy bay. Naked babies play in the mud, and mothers with pitifully small cups scurry to milk shops in an effort to get the precious food for their infants.

Little Known of Frogs.
Along the rivers and streams in some parts of Texas, and around the margins of ponds and lakes, we meet with great beds of the water hyacinths, says the American Forestry Magazine. Their delicate white flowers and dark green leaves present a picture of floral luxuriance not very easily forgotten. Where they grow, one should be on the lookout for various species of reptiles or batrachians, and their habits and appearances in nature carefully observed. We know very little about some of the forms, and science will welcome any new facts in regard to them. Some of the frogs and toads, for example, are not only very rare in collections, but we are practically lacking in any field notes upon their exact distribution and habits.

Modern Cereals Superior.
The wheat and barley of today are much larger and finer grains than the wheat and barley which have been found in ancient Egyptian tombs and in the buried cities of Greece. As for rice, which feeds more than one-third of the human race, there are now a number of varieties (developed chiefly by the Japanese) which are far superior to any that were known even half a century ago.

All of our grains, excepting maize, seem to have originated in southern Asia. Consumption of rice, the great Asiatic cereal, is now growing rapidly in the United States, most of our people having learned only recently to appreciate it, and how to prepare it for the table.

Not a Matter of Relief.
"Music speaks a universal language," said the enthusiast.
"I have heard so," replied Mr. Cumrox. "But judging by the programs, the words of a universal language are just as hard to spell and pronounce as any others."
