Oregon Jerseys Win High Honors In Butterfat Awards.

In a recently compiled report of the medal awards for 1920 issued by the American Jersey Cattle Club, seventy one Jersey cows completed records for the year with a production of over 700 pounds of butterfat within the year on authenticated test. Of the ten highest records made in the year, five were made by Oregon cows with an average production of $96.33 lbs. of fat.

Heading the list of breeders of medal winners is J. M. Dickson & Son of Shedd with seven to their credit, followed by G. G. Hewitt of Independence with four, Ed Cary of Carlton with three and O. Pickard and E. J. Farnham of Marion with two. In the list of sires represented by medal winning daughters, Valentine's Ashburn Baronet, the Dickson herd sire, ranks first, credited with five, Rinda Lad of S. B., the Hewitt bull, second with four. Poppy St. Mawes, with two medal winners, is tied for third place with an eastern bull and St. Mawes of Ashburn, also a Dickson sire, is one of four in fourth place with two gold medal daughters. Golden Glow's Chief ranks fifth with one gold and one silver medal to his credit. Thus an Oregon bull appears in the first five places in the list of producing sires for 1920.

Ten cows by reason of superior performance, won more than one medal each and of these, seven were Oregon Jerseys. Nineteen states are represented in the awards made. Oregon cows with only 1914 registered, representing only 4 1-2 per cent of the Jerseys recorded within the year, won 18 gold, 3 silver and 1 bronze or 31 per cent of all the awards made. Ohio ranked second with 8 gold and 1 bronze; Maine third with 7 gold and 2 bronze; Massachusetts, fourth with 5 gold and 1 silver and Washington fifth with five gold medals.

This remarkable record of performance places Oregon in the first rank as premier Jersey state of the Union and should act as a stimulus to still greater effort to maintain that enviable position.

HOW TO KEEP FIT--- BACKACHE UNNECESSARY

It May Often Be Cured by Adjusting the Spine and Correcting the Posture

Most all grown-up folks have more or less backache at times. Certainly most of those who have to work for a living do. A good many people, however, have it because they don't work. Unfortunately, women are much more afflicted than men. A prevalent notion exists that this is because they are women, but this is not true. It is not because of their sex, but because of the artificial habits of life of woman in modern civilization. Women of savage races never have backache. There is no panacea for backache any more than there is for headache or any other symptom.

In these scientific days we should not talk about a cure-all for any complaint whatever. Instead we should always remember that any pain or ache is nothing more or less than a danger signal sounded by Madam Nature for the purpose of calling one's attention to the fact that something is wrong. That is as far as nature can go, and it ought to be far enough. The rest of it is up to the patient or the physician, or both. In other words, never treat symptoms, but hunt for the cause first. If you can find it remove it if possible, if not relieve it the best you can, under the circumstances.

Many backaches are merely reflex pains from internal organs. If they do not yield to ordinary domestic treatment or to rest or exercise, the patient should at once obtain a competent osteopathic examination to ascertain if there is any disturbance in any abdominal or pelvic organ, causing the pain. If so this should have adequate attention.

A vicious circle is frequently found to exist and, unless the examination be an osteopathic one, the patient may fail to get relief because of the traditional medical method of concentrating attention upon disease of organs and failing to give due consideration to spinal posture and correct alignment of vertebrae. To put it differently, there may be a disease of an organ causing backache and it may be also true that the abnormal action of this organ may be caused by spinal interference with the nerves which control it.

Osteopathic correction by readjusting the spine, which has slumped into bad posture from occupational habit, is the first step. This is to be followed by paying careful attention to correct poise, standing and sitting well balanced instead of in the lazy manner which so easily results from the incessant fatigue of monotonous work. Next comes the gradual building up of those muscles which are used little or not at all in the usual occupation.
