THE LIFE OF GAS MANTLES

Illuminating Device Should Last 1,000 Burning Hours—May Be Destroyed in Few Moments.

The following facts about gas mantles are taken from Gas Logic, the house organ of the biggest gas company in New York.
"A good gas mantle should last from 500 to 800 or even 1,000 burning hours. Breakage, however, is not always due to poor mantle quality. Turning the gas off and on and the slight explosion that sometimes occurs when it is lighted is highly destructive of mantles. A mantle which, burning steadily, might last for several thousand hours, may be destroyed in a few minutes by rough handling or in a few hours by unusual but unavoidable wear and tear.
"Initial candle power is that measured when the mantle is first lighted. It is extremely high in cheap and inferior mantles. But soon, often within a few minutes, the brilliancy of the light fades, never to be regained. The intensity of this initial light is a snare into which the unwary and unwise frequently fall in purchasing cheap mantles.
"Sustained candle power is the measure of light given out by a mantle over a long period, and is, of course, the real test of a good mantle. The high-class mantle may not have an initial candle power equal to that of a cheaper substitute, but in the long test its superiority is demonstrated.
"Some of the gas companies are now selling mantles with a guarantee of at least 90 days' service."
