NO ONE SLEPT

We have listened to sermons when we would have given much for the privilege of slipping out of the church unobserved.

Such was not the case Sunday morning at the Presbyterian church, when a most practical sermon was well delivered by the pastor, the Rev. Edwin H. Edgar. We do not recall the passage of scripture read, but the sermon was about the model church, and Mrs. Edgar sang that old song, "The Model Church"—"Well, wife, I've found the model church, and worshipped there today . . .", which was very appropriate and was appreciated.

There was only one part of the morning service that didn't seem just right—there were several vacant benches. We can't help thinking what an inspiration it would be to the pastor and the choir if every seat would be filled next Sunday morning. Don't be afraid to go, for Rev. Edgar quits when he gets it all said. He doesn't tell it all a second time like some speakers—and editors.

One thing is sure: If the small town editor doesn't find the errors in the proofs, she can count on discovering them while distributing the type—if some high school student doesn't call attention to them before.
