

mills are represented by Brown Bros. & Co., and in Portland by Jacobs Bros. & Co.

Major Thomas Charman, one of Oregon City's most successful business men, has been established here since 1853, and still does a large business in general merchandising. In anything that is likely to benefit his locality, we find Mr. Charman always willing to assist. He was one of the principal projectors of the Woolen Mills, and also helped to start the Clackamas Paper Mill, located two miles below Oregon City. He has often served the people satisfactorily in places of trust and honor.

scrupulous honesty have secured for him a large share of patronage.

S. Ackerman occupies a handsome corner store 40 feet front by 50 in depth, where he was just unpacking his summer stock when we last visited Oregon City. His facilities for purchasing are such that he successfully competes with Portland firms. Having done business here for twenty years, he is well known and liberally patronized.

Johnson, McCown & Macrum, attorneys-at-law, have been established here since 1865. Mr. Macrum, who represents the firm in Portland, was ad-and has been established here for fifteen years. He has a very extensive practice, and is also a member of the firm of Chance & Welch, whose elegant dental parlors are located in Odd Fellows' Temple, Portland. We can personally speak in favor of Dr. Welch's skill as a surgeon dentist. Some six years ago we suffered from a species of lock-jaw, brought about by affected teeth, and under the most unfavorable circumstances, Dr. Welch extracted three teeth for us. Our attending physician at that time, especially praised this as a fine operation.

In February next his son, Fred G., will be admitted as a member of the firm.

John Myers has been established here in general merchandising since 1860, does an extensive business and is also part farmer, as he is the owner of 900 acres of as fine land as can be seen in Clackamas county. He has served as Sheriff of his county for two years and as State Senator for four years.

H. A. Hughes, dealer in general merchandise and farming implements, has been established in business since 1860, although a resident of the place since 1853. Strict attention to business and admitted as partner four years ago. The firm enjoy a lucrative practice, their fees in the Oregon City office alone amounting to $8,000 for 1878. As agents for different parties, they handle annually about $200,000, and they have the names of over three hundred money lenders. This is the principal law firm in the county, and we judge that the advice they give their clients is sound, from the fact that for so large a county as Clackamas there is comparatively little litigation. They are also agents for Insurance Companies, and do a general real estate business.

Dr. J. Welch, dentist, is a pioneer on this coast,

The principal hotel here is the "Cliff House," of which T. W. Rhodes is proprietor. He has been established for four years, and must be giving general satisfaction, as he evidently does a good business.

George Fuchs is the manufacturer of the Willamette Falls cigar. We never use the weed, therefore cannot be considered a judge of the article; but as he received the first premium at the Oregon State Fair, and employs no Chinese, his cigars should have the preference from those who will smoke.
