

PORT DISCOVERY, W. T.—A LAND-LOCKED HARBOR.

Few, who go up and down Puget Sound on the regular passenger steamers, suspect what a treat they lose in named the bay after his ship, the "Discovery." This bay is situated some eight miles in the rear of Port Townsend, and about two miles from its mouth is Protection Island, so called sels of any place on the Pacific coast. The Port Discovery mills are situated on the west side of the harbor, about six miles from its mouth. Its present means of communication with Port not visiting the beautiful, land-locked harbor at Port Discovery.

UNION BLOCK, FIRST, STARK AND OAK STS., PORTLAND, OR.—FROM A PHOTO BY I. G. DAVIDSON.

This bay is some ten miles long, and averages from three to three and one-half miles wide. It was first discovered by Vancouver, the navigator, who because when a person is in the center of the bay, this island appears to wholly close its entrance, making it land-locked, yet of easy entrance, as well as easily fortified. It is naturally the best situated for a naval depot for wooden war ves-

Townsend is by stage to Yukey's landing, thence on the steam ferry to Port Discovery.

The biggest skylight in existence—The moon.