To Those who "Do Not Care for a Religious Paper."

Would it make any difference to you if you knew of one that does not advocate the doctrines of everlasting punishment, vicarious atonement, miracles and an infallible Bible?

One that does stand for good, common sense in religion, "truth for authority," believes that religion should be friendly to science, and advocates a religious fellowship that will welcome all of every belief who are willing to work for truth, righteousness and love in the world?

One that does not fill its space with learned or ignorant discussions of scripture texts, but does give every week thirty-two columns of fresh and rational reading, including a sermon on some living topic, editorials and contributions on current events; and news of the progress of liberal religious thoughts? If you think you might care for such a paper, send ten cents in stamps for ten weeks.

That's a thundering looking suit Wibsey wears.

Oh, it's louder than that.—Light.

CHEHALIS, WASHINGTON

On the Northern Pacific Railroad, midway between Portland and Seattle, and directly in the center of Western Washington's finest farming country, only 65 miles from the Pacific ocean by the Willapa harbor route,

IS A WELL-BUILT TOWN.

Has a $10,000 school house, a $20,000 bank building, and other improvements to correspond with the dignity of the county seat of Lewis, one of the richest counties of Washington. Chehalis will be a manufacturing and shipping town of 20,000 people in five years from now. For detailed information, address
