

PORTLAND'S GREAT EXPOSITION.

The wondrous growth of the Pacific northwest within the past few years has attracted widespread and universal attention to this country throughout the entire United States. Just as the Paris World's Fair was intended to represent the material progress of the world, and as the Chicago World's Fair is intended to represent the great material progress of the United States, so it is expected to make the Portland Industrial Exposition the coming fall a comprehensive representation of the wonderful growth and development of Oregon and Washington. The exhibits will comprise a full display of the natural products of the states, showing their vast agricultural, mineral timber and fruit resources, and representations of the great merchandise and manufactured products that this country offers a market for.

Prominent among the exhibits will be the display of the great firm of STAYER & WALKER, whose headquarters are in the New Market Block, Portland, Oregon, and who have their own branch houses at Spokane Falls, Wash., Walla Walla, Wash., Seattle, Wash., Pomeroy, Wash., Colfax, Wash., Moscow, Idaho, LaGrande, Oregon, and Medford, Oregon.

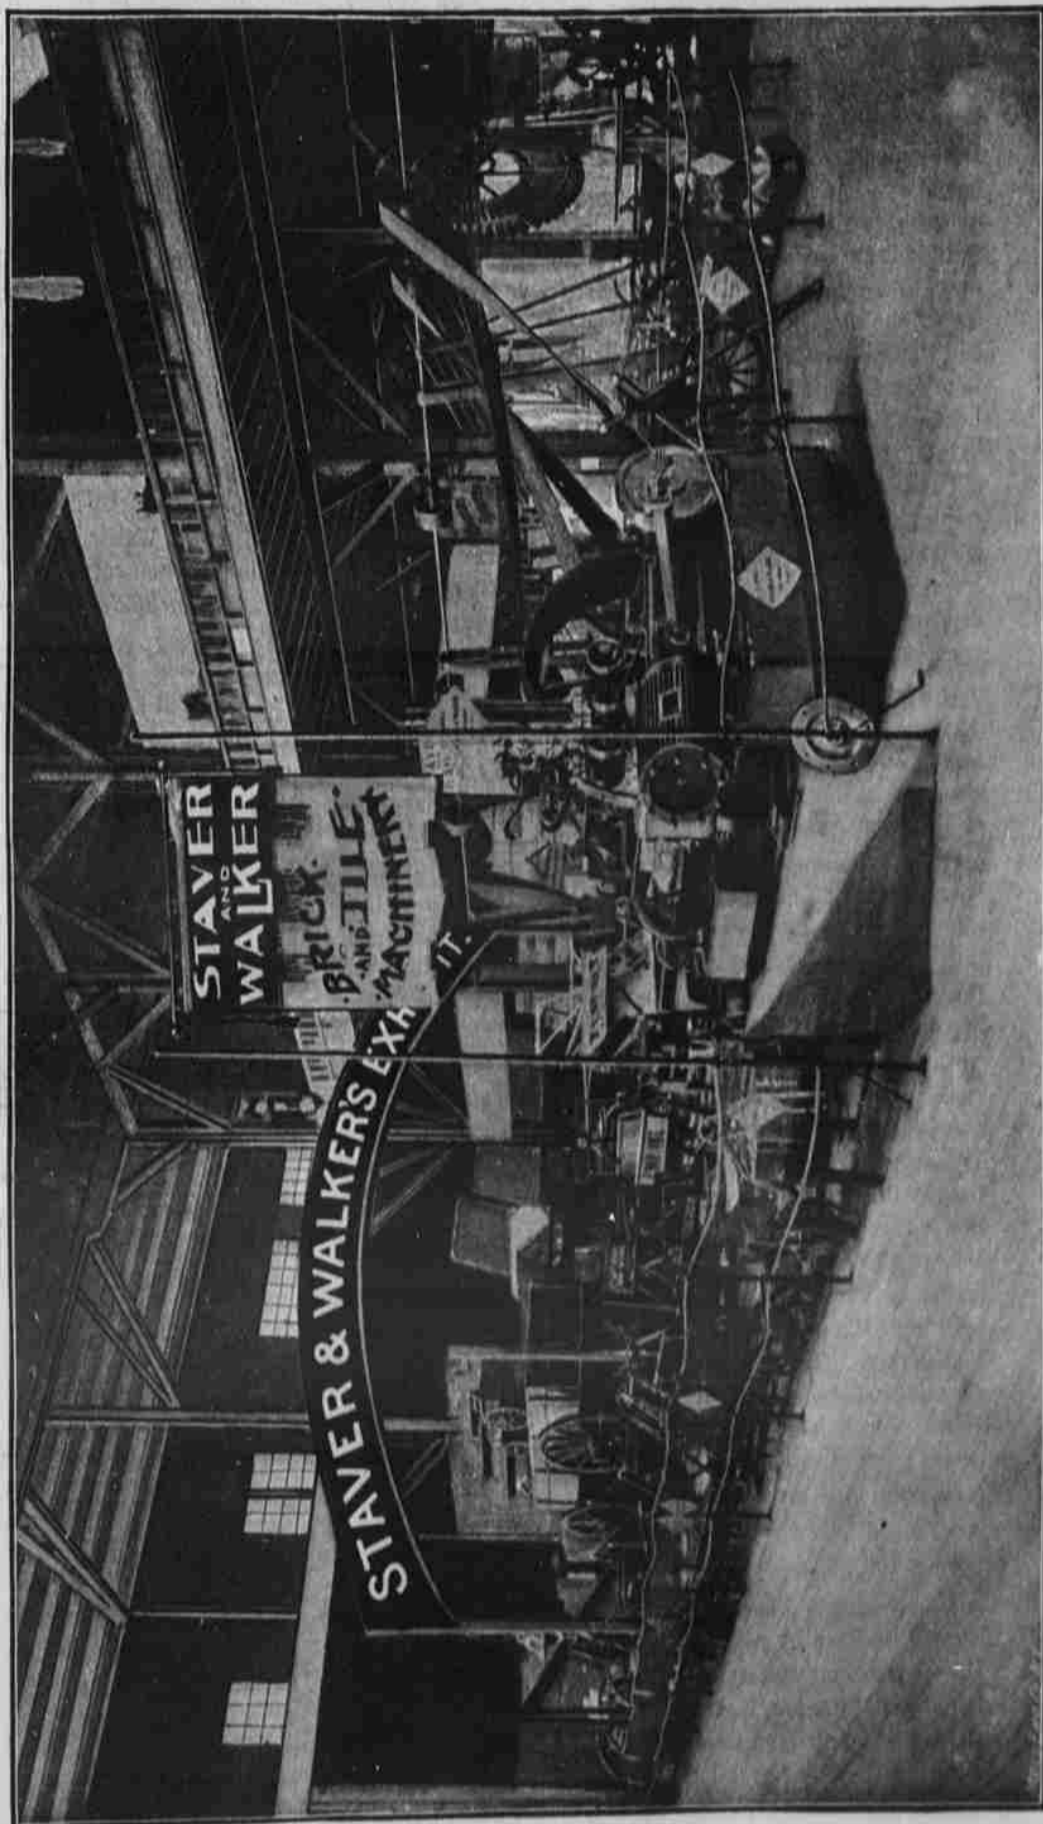

This firm carry the largest and most varied line of Machinery and Vehicles handled by any one firm in the world. Their exhibits will comprise Stationary, Vertical and Marine Engines and Boilers, Saw Mills and Shingle Mills, Wood-working Machinery, Brick and Tile Machinery, Steam Excavating and Road Grading Machinery, and Machine Supplies of all kinds, as well as Farm, Dairy and Mill Machinery, Wagons, Buggies, Carriages, Harness and Vehicles of every description.

It will certainly be of interest and advantage to all our readers who may visit the Portland Exposition, to examine carefully the exhibits of STAYER & WALKER, or call and see them at their headquarters at the New Market Block, Portland, Oregon, or at any of their branch houses, or to write them for one of their handsomely-illustrated catalogues and price lists.

The Portland Exposition for 1890 will chronicle a wonderful era of progress for the northwest, and all who can come will be pleased and profited, and return home better satisfied than ever before with this country and its possibilities. The firm of Stayer & Walker have done as much, if not more, for the development of the northwest than any other one factor—Nature alone excepted. By the broad and liberal policy pursued in furnishing the very latest improved Machinery, Implements and Vehicles at the lowest possible prices consistent with the best quality, they have been enabled to build up the largest business in their line there is to-day in the world.
