GOODMAN THE CAPITALIST (to farmer who wishes a loan)—Very sorry, but the law regulating interest makes it impossible for me to accommodate you, as I send my money over the line into Washington where there is no such law. You might try Mr. Grabem next block below. I'll just give you a note to him which may help you.

MR. GRABEM—Ah! a note from my friend Goodman. Well, money is very scarce, but I think I know a party of whom I can get it for you at eight per cent, if you are willing to pay a bonus of fifty dollars on the loan.

The farmer, not having had the advantages of our friends Goodman and Grabem, fails to see wherein the usury law is a benefit to him.

OREGON'S USURY LAW IS A GREAT PROTECTION—TO THE MONEY LENDER.
