ALONG THE PEND D'OREILLE.

The Pend d'Oreille country, in which the Great Northern railway is building, is simply grand. On both sides of the river from the lake down to the falls near the Washington line a continuous chain of majestic pine-clad hills makes the hearts of the lovers of nature's grandest best fast as they contemplate the work of the Almighty hand. The valleys and low-lands along the river are particularly adapted to agriculture, the soil being a rich, black, sandy loam of several feet in depth. It grows luxuriantly on an average of three tons to the acre. Not only is it a hay land, but grain and vegetables give an enormous yield, oats growing a hundred bushels to the acre, when sown in sixty, and cabbages that will weigh fifty pounds to the head. Small fruits grow even to a minimum and yield exceedingly large. As a home for those who desire all the advantages of farming connected with a healthful climate, nowhere in the west can a more favorable location be found. The land all along this beautiful river is being rapidly taken up, but as yet it is only the more favorable location, and there are hundreds of valuable places awaiting the settler. Timber of all kinds for building and manufacturing purposes grows in abundance, and will last for hundreds of years to come without perceptibly diminishing the supply. These forests extend over the whole northern portion of Idaho and will some day make the lumber industry a very valuable one to this state. The land is as yet unimproved, but the rapid increase of settlement will demand an early survey of this valuable region. Communication is at present rather limited, but this state of affairs will not last long. Boats will be put on the river and railroads will soon be in operation. The river is navigable all the way to the falls, which are situated near the line that divides Idaho from Washington. There is no region throughout the northwest that offers so much to the homeseeker as does this country, situated in the extreme north of the pan handle of Idaho, bounded north by British Columbia, east by Montana and west by Washington. It would be impossible to even approximate our mineral wealth, and this great industry, connected as it is with farming and lumbering, is sure to make of Kootenai the greatest county in the state of Idaho. - M. D. Wright, in Kootenai Courier.

Alasworth, B. C., is experiencing the wave of prosperity which seems to be sweeping over the Kootenai lake district. A good deal of building is going on, and many town lots are being sold at prices ranging from $250.00 to $500.00 each. Several operators from Idaho and Montana are investigating mines with a view of purchasing. Alasworth bids fair to be the liveliest town in the Kootenai lake district during the coming summer. The Kootenai lake district is situated just north of the international boundary line and it is attracting a good many immigrants.
