Lewiston lays claim to having the most advantageous position of any city in the state with reference to commercial advantages. First, it lies at the head of river navigation, a point of special interest now that the question of an open river to the sea is assuming such vast proportions, and creating a demand which will result in clearing the river from Lewiston to tidewater, so that large steamers can ply the entire length of the river between these points. This secures to Lewiston the most advantageous shipping point in north Idaho. The grain and produce of this vast region, composed of the counties of Latah, Shoshone, Idaho and Nez Perce, will be shipped here to be transferred to the river route, it being at all times the cheaper means of transportation; again, the topographical location of Lewiston secures for it every line of road extended for the development of central Idaho. The Clearwater flows from its source in the Bitter Roots almost directly west, cutting the state by a deep canyon. The Snake and Salmon rivers from the south do likewise. Any railroad projected into the rich mineral and agricultural centers of the state, must pass up or down these deep river canyons. They form the cheapest and only practical routes for railroads penetrating the undeveloped portions of the state. Lewiston, located at the intersection of the Snake and Clearwater, is the common point at which all lines must meet. Its natural location of necessity makes it the future great railroad center of the northwest.—Lewiston Teller.

Omhalaska is not only a fur-trading center of great importance, but also a point of call and base of supplies for the whaling fleet annually cruising in Bering sea and the Arctic ocean. The natural wealth of the Aleutian chain of islands is confined almost solely to products of the sea. The furs are confined to a limited number of foxes of inferior quality and sea otters, the latter decreasing in numbers from year to year. Fish in immense quantities and of great variety can be found in the waters surrounding these islands. Nearly all the numerous bays and harbors are visited by schools of herring two or three times a year and every stream and rivulet has its run of salmon, while the bays and adjoining banks are crowded with codfish and a striped fish resembling mackeral, which is of most excellent flavor and great richness. No part of this piscatory wealth, however, is utilized at present beyond the annual supply of dried fish for the natives of the islands, who have decreased during the last decade from 2,500 to less than 900 of both sexes. The climate of these islands is mild, and there can be no doubt that many of them contain level land that could be utilized for stock and sheep raising were it not for the difficulty of bringing the product to market.—Census Bulletin.

The report of the comptroller of the currency shows that the number of national banks in Washington has increased fifty per cent. during the past year, now numbering sixty. The total capital stock is $5,864,500, an increase of nearly $2,000,000; surplus fund, $1,502,407; undivided profits, $622,957; individual deposits, $13,061,731, an increase of about $1,000,000; loans and discounts, $14,136,391, an increase of nearly $3,000,000.
