Affection, support winning combination

The winning entry in the Cascade AIDS Project's AIDS prevention ad contest shows two men being affectionate with each other, coupled with a text encouraging men to practice safer sex. Randy Ponce (left) congratulates the winners after presenting them with a check for $500. Neil Robertson holds the check, Duncan Bryson appears in the ad, and Jeff Smith says that he and Robertson produced the ad using a photograph by Hiroshi Iwaya (right).

A $10,000 grant from the Oregon Health Division will pay costs for producing the advertising campaign that will appear in newspapers and on billboards for three months beginning in June. A gay man who saw the winning entry said, "I'd be proud to have that on a Tri-Met bus. It's beautiful!"

Campaign contribution welcomed.

Mayor Bud Clark receives a check for a $7,000 contribution to his re-election campaign from John Baker, chair of the Right to Privacy PAC, Oregon's gay and lesbian political-action committee. The contribution to Mayor Clark's campaign was the largest of more than $25,000 in contributions made to politicians in the primary races by RTP.

Shirley Gold received $6,750; Dick Springer, Bev Stein and Mike Lindberg each received $1,000. Vera Katz, David Dix, Kevin-Paul Vang, Dave McTeague, Dick Bogle, John Ball and Jerry Rust were given $500 each. Polly Casterline, Rick Bauman and Pauline Anderson received $200 each.

Lavender stripe meets

Gays and lesbians in Oregon are emulating those in other states by solidly backing the candidacy of Jesse Jackson for president. Jackson has not failed to address concerns of lesbians and gays as have other candidates in the Democratic primary. (And forget the Republicans altogether.)

Jesse Jackson was the only candidate to attend or speak at the National March on Washington for Lesbian and Gay Rights last October and has made outreach to gays and lesbians consistently since that time.
