I'M READY TO HAVE A GOOD TIME. I'm intelligent, attractive, active and a good communicator. GF hoping to meet a non-smoking GF 35-45. My interests are simple: most sports, day hikes with picnics, jazz, travel, animals (especially cats and wildlife), reading, laughing, live theater, education. I prefer feminine women who are emotionally single and healthy. Please be open minded and flexible. Please don't be loud or stubborn. Quality people with goals are welcome. Blind box 408

LOOKING FOR YOUTH, BEAUTY AND WEALTH? Forget it. Retired professor, fixed income, not much to look at. Long on affection, short on passion. Blind box 416. Note: If this ad draws no reply, I'll try something snappier. I try not to brag on Thursdays.

THIS TALL, THIN, ATTRACTIVE ANDROGYNOUS dyke is a small town import eager to taste the joys of the big city. I thrive on hugs and romance, racquetball, sci-fi, garage sales, the outdoors, k.d. lang, crab, costume parties and lying naked in the sun. I wear my black leather jacket about as often as I indulge in a long bath. I'm as likely to use a chain saw as I am to send flowers. I value honesty, warmth, intelligence, fearlessness, humor and eccentricity but am turned off by smokers, druggies, alcoholics, obesity, space cadets, couch potatoes, megabitches and ultrafems. I need friends more than lovers, but both possibilities are equally intriguing. My ideal? An attractive, fit, stable Amazon unafraid of intimacy. PO Box 19724, Portland, OR 97219.

AN ATHEIST 12 STEP PROGRAM? Lesbian feminist ACOA and recovering codependent wants to hear from others who have found recovery outside a 12 step program or in a 12 step program designed for those who do not believe in a higher power. Not only do I not believe in "GOD" but I do not believe in using "the group" or "group recovery force" or mother nature as an alternative. The concept of "power over" is a model I do not find support in. Is there an existential atheist recovery group? Can co-dependent behavior be changed in a support group without transferring the dependency to the group? If you've found alternative recovery means write me! Blind box 415.
