THE ALYSON ALMANAC

PRESENTS
in gay and lesbian history

February 8, 1977: Midge Costanza, acting as community liaison in the new Jimmy Carter administration, receives the first official lesbian and gay delegation to the White House. Carter had been in office less than three weeks at the time.

Happy Birthday to Ramon Novarro

(Feb. 6, 1899-Oct. 31, 1968) Novarro appeared in over a hundred films by 1922, usually typecast as the quintessential Latin lover. Swooning women made him a box-office hit, but his real interest was in rough trade. He was brutally murdered by two hustlers one Halloween night.

In 1982, Hollywood featured lesbian and gay themes on a level never before reached. Personal Best (released Feb. 5) starred Mariel Hemingway and Patrice Donnelly as competing athletes who fall in love. A week later came Harry Hamlin in Making Love, a drama about a married man who realized he was gay.

That same month, Wisconsin became the first state to get a wide-reaching gay rights law. Governor Lee Dreyfus, a Republican, as he signed the bill into law, expressed his belief in the "fundamental Republican principle" of restricted governmental involvement in the lives of citizens.
