

Inside
There's a Jack in this box who's out on the airwaves
Page 33

The Circus is Coming to Town...

but don't take your kids....

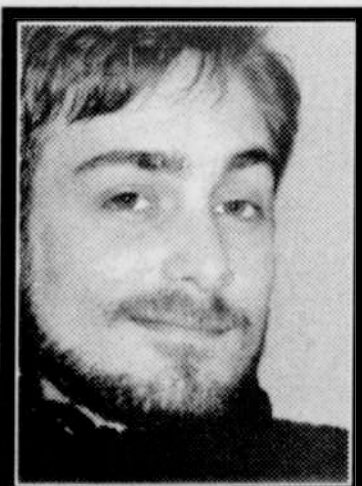

Gay Life Health Network gathers men to give them the lowdown on gettin' down, down there

by Inga Sorensen

Page 26

Tough questions, frank answers

A somewhat adversarial interview with outspoken lesbian feminist and women's music avant-gardist Alix Dobkin

BY CHRISTOPHER D. CUTTONE

What?!" I gasped. "You want me to interview Alix Dobkin? Isn't she that crazy, trans-hating lesbian separatist?" "Well, not exactly..." came the answer. "We just thought you interviewing her would be more interesting than her being interviewed by another lesbian feminist."

Alix Dobkin

out Dobkin and I have a few things in common. We both grew up in Philly, both enjoy critical thinking and discussion of social issues, and we agree to disagree.

First of all, I want to let you know my perspective. I'm a queer-identified bisexual man, 26-years-old, and I've spent a fair amount of time pondering the "sociology of gender" at the university level.

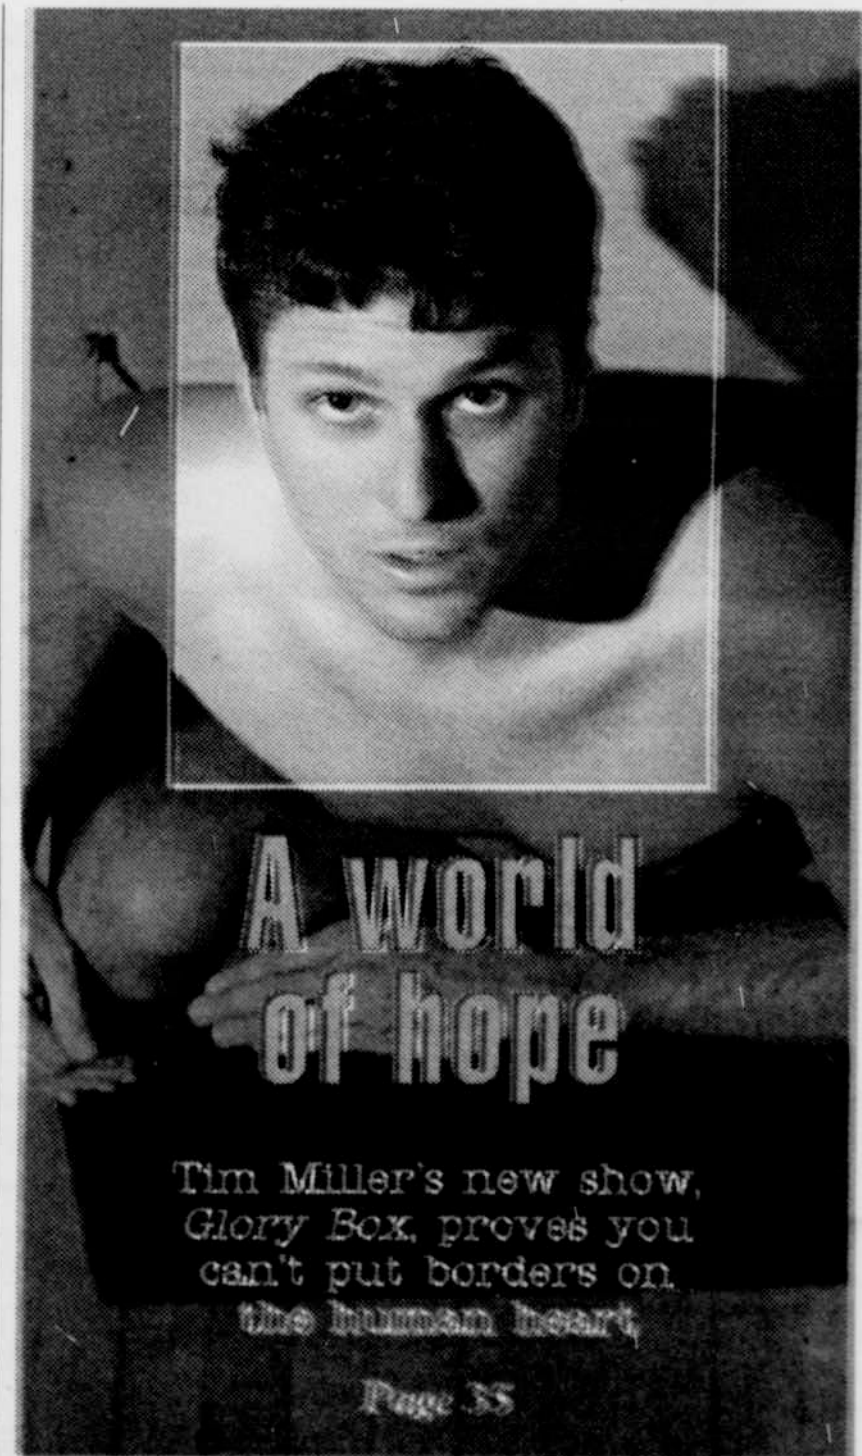

Thanx for your intro. Even if you hadn't described your background I would have guessed it from your questions...a dead giveaway.

Continued on Page 6

she was a big meanie who refused to have any sympathy for the discrimination experienced by trans people.

Wrong, wrong, wrong.

I learned how wrong I was via e-mail. (I thought we'd disagree so much that I was afraid to interview her in person. I had some tough questions in mind, so I even feared a phone conversation.) Turns

Tim Miller's new show, Glory Box, proves you can't put borders on the human heart.

Page 35