Paul Scardina has the solution to all of your urban problems

Scardina notes that "our typical customer is an urban dweller representing both ends of the spectrum of either the pre- or post-children era." New customers are invited to "bring in your furniture problems, and we will solve them."

Across town on Southeast Hawthorne Boulevard there's a change in ownership at everyone's favorite space, In Her Image Gallery. Terri Welsh recently became the proud owner and invites each and all to drop by and say hello. The focus at In Her Image continues to be honoring and celebrating women, their energy and their works.

This first-time business owner will feature an "artist of the month" with a meet-and-greet reception on first Sundays. Additional plans for the gallery include book readings and the addition of a comfy and cozy tea room.

And if you log on to www.inherimage-gallery.com and sign up for the quarterly e-mail newsletter by April 30, you can receive a $10 merchandise gift certificate. What a deal!

Finally, in the Queer Profit "Hmm, really" segment, it's been reported that former Portlander Donna Red Wing has left her position with the Colorado-based Gill Foundation. She could not be reached for comment, but inquiring minds want to know if she might be headed back to Oregon—and if maybe there's a career opportunity in our area, one of equitable value that might warrant her attention and northerly focus.

So what do you think? ☐

Business news with a queer bent should be reported to MARTY DAVIS at marty@justout.com.
