

The love will last forever.

But how long will President Bush let the marriage last?

May 17 was a momentous day for committed couples in Massachusetts who now have access to equal rights, responsibilities and protections under state law. It's a historic and remarkable victory. But it's not over yet.

But President Bush and his extremist allies are already trying to undo the marriages of same-sex couples in places like Massachusetts, Oregon, and San Francisco.

They're working to pass a discriminatory amendment to the U.S. Constitution that would forever deny same-sex couples the rights of marriage and could forcibly divorce couples who have already married. Opponents of marriage equality are also pushing state constitutional amendments to mobilize their base by discriminating against our families, including one in Oregon.

If we don't act now, we could lose it all.

Speak now. Or forever hold your peace.
Join us today – www.hrc.org

The Human Rights Campaign congratulates the more than 3,000 couples who have married in Oregon and the fair-minded officials who made those marriages possible.