On Our First Camping Trip

JOSEPH PATRICK JOHNSON
Vancouver, Wash.

I chose this one because I have an empathy for pooped pooches on camping trips. My own dog employs the theory of "I'm not waking up or leaving this car until I'm home and safe."

—Marty Davis, Publisher

Lone House

MIKE SCHULTZ
Portland

This tin roof—rusted, might I add—is more than meets the eye. Is this photo a social critique about poverty in rural country? Is it an existentialist deconstruction of isolation and disconnectedness from humankind? Or is it the slammest undiscovered love shack where so many farm babies were conceived and debauched? The photo makes me feel both unnerved and comforted, and for that, I thank Mr. Schultz.

—Jaymee R. Cuti, Staff Writer

Ichiro on the Road: Route 66, New Mexico, September 2004

ANDREA UEHARA
Hillsboro

I like this photo because it makes me smile. Nothing like a terrified cat in your lap to keep you awake during a long drive. And also: I love pussy.

—Bonnie Barrett, Art Director
