PORTLAND SIGHTINGS NATIONWIDE

Portland has fallen out of the national news spotlight after dominating headlines about marriage equality a year ago. Yet this summer, two national magazines have featured Portland as a forefront city in politics and culture.

Local bands Fact or Fiction, Swan Island and Pom Pom Meltdown were included in the summer edition of Venus, a rock music magazine based in Chicago. The bands, featuring queer musicians who raise awareness about sexual minority angst, were touted as rays of hope for Portland's post-punk music scene.

At the same time, the city's own gay commissioner, Sam Adams, was featured in The Advocate, a national gay and lesbian newsmagazine, for a story about out and influential politicians.

PERFORMERS TAKE THE STAGE TO BENEFIT WOMEN'S SHELTER

Providence Milwaukie Hospital and Salmonberry Catering are sponsoring the sixth annual Pathway to Peace, a five-kilometer fun walk/run and concert to end domestic and sexual violence.

The walk/run is at 5 p.m. June 25, and registration begins at 4. The concert takes place from 6 until 10. All events are in the beautiful Mary S. Young Park, 19900 Willamette Drive in West Linn.

While domestic violence is a serious subject, this event is a time for fun and is designed for the whole family. It features a post-walk picnic dinner and activities for children.

The post-walk lineup includes the Aurora Chorus, Linda Hornbuckle, Nicole Campbell, Rye Hollow and Mary Kadderly. The concert is free.

Pathway* to Peace benefits Clackamas Women's Services, whose mission is to end domestic and sexual violence against women and children. The only nonprofit domestic and sexual violence shelter in Clackamas County, it provides lifesaving shelter to an average of 350 women and children each year. The 24-hour crisis hot line, 503-654-2288, receives about 5,000 calls annually.

Registration for the event is $25 for adults and $15 for youth, and children younger than 6 are free. For a brochure, call 503-722-2366. Registration information is also available online at www.cwsor.org or www.providence.org/milwaukie.
