Reverend Billy, the pastor of the Church of Stop Shopping, is the creation of the New York City-based author/actor William Talen. This project garnered notice in 1997 through sidewalk preaching in the Times Square Disney Store. To date, hundreds of performances have taken place inside and out of transnational stores throughout Manhattan, though Disney, the Gap and Starbucks remain favorite theaters. More recently the Reverend has defended the Edgar Allan Poe House against the aggressions of NYU's Law School. Evening-length and fully interactive church services are staged in downtown New York.

His collar is fake but his calling is real.
— Alisa Solomon, Village Voice

Once in a while there comes a long a beloved character who sums up the coming together of politics, writing and music. Now it is Reverend Billy.

— Ambrose Clancy, Washington Post
