

WINNER PEOPLE CATEGORY "Hands" Jeffrey Horvitz

MARTY DAVIS

Just Out judges perceived Jeffrey Horvitz's shot, "Hands," as an optical illusion. Depending on the viewer's gaze, some noticed the sharply focused hands with visible skin tonalities, while others were immediately drawn to the package.

"The crotch shot is part of it, but it's thrown out of focus, so the real focus is the hands," said Horvitz. "It's kind of a sexy shot at the same time."

Horvitz moved to Portland from San Francisco, where he was an art student. He relocated "just for a change" and to become a better photographer.

"It was just awesome that I won something, because it shows me that this is the direction I really need to be focusing my energy on," he said.

"Hands" was photographed as part of a series on body parts.

"I thought of throwing in the out-of-focus underwear line to break it up, but the real focus is the skin tone and the hands," said Horvitz, 46. "I thought it worked well because of the depth of field."

Regardless of perspective, the photo exudes masculine sensuality applied by a capable, queer eye. jo
